Congressional pay

Dear Mr. Golden,

Your letter is very timely in the political atmosphere we are experiencing in Washington today. After reading your Congressmen's Pay and the way they are handled, it is easy to see why the public is so disillusioned with these individuals. A good account of their activities and problems could do much toward reversing this trend.

Sincerely,

John Hartley

Consumer's rights statement

Editor's note: Addressed! The following letter is a part of the correspondence on the Washington, D.C., Congressmen's Pay case.

Dear Mr. Kristoff,

I am in complete agreement with the sentiment that Congressmen should be paid a more modest salary. However, I believe that the current pay scale is too low and may not be sufficient to attract the best talent for public service. The current pay is not competitive with other occupations that require similar responsibilities and qualifications.

Sincerely,

Lisa Green

Pornography

Editor's note: Addressed! The following letter is part of the correspondence on the proposed bill to ban all forms of pornography.

Dear Mr. Hall,

I am not in favor of banning all forms of pornography. I believe that it is a matter of personal choice and that people should be able to make their own decisions about what they consume. However, I do believe that there should be regulations in place to protect children from exposure to inappropriate material.

Sincerely,

Robert Smith

Permanent School Fund important constitutional legacy

By William H. Kirby

The Permanent School Fund is a crucial constitutional legacy of Texas. It was established in 1876 to provide for the education of Texas children. The fund is managed by a board of trustees appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the Senate. The fund's assets are invested and managed to generate income for the benefit of public education in Texas. Over the years, the Permanent School Fund has played a vital role in supporting Texas public education, funding school construction, and providing financial assistance to school districts.

Magic ingredient in good teaching won't show up in competency test

A recent study suggests that the magic ingredient in good teaching won't show up in competency tests. The study, conducted by a team of researchers, found that high competency scores on teaching tests do not necessarily correlate with effective teaching in the classroom.

The researchers used a variety of measures to assess teaching effectiveness, including student outcomes, teacher evaluations, and classroom observations. They found that while high competency scores on teaching tests may indicate a teacher's knowledge of teaching methods and content, they do not necessarily reflect their ability to engage students and facilitate learning.

The study's findings suggest that teachers should be evaluated on their ability to connect with students, create a positive learning environment, and help students achieve their goals. They should also be encouraged to develop their teaching skills through ongoing professional development and collaboration with other educators.

Methodist cleric Biggs talks of today's church

By Dorothy Mowery

Methodism is a major religion, but it is also a personal one. The Methodists believe in the individual's relationship with God and the importance of personal faith and spiritual growth. They also emphasize the role of the local church community as a support system for its members. In this context, the role of the clergy is crucial, as they are often seen as leaders and mentors for the congregations. The Rev. Mitch Biggs, a pastor at the First United Methodist Church in Carthage, is one such leader. He shares his insights on the challenges and opportunities facing today's church in an article published in the Panola County Post.
