Sybil's Scrbbles
I hope you are enjoying this beautiful day. I know we are in the fifty miles of the Turner County Sheriff's Department. They have the cells, they have the papers, they have the mail, and they have the children. I don't know if it's a good day or not, but it's a day to remember.

Contact birthday. Happy birthday, "Mr. Daddy and Grandpa". I want to say hello to my daughter, Gabrielle, and thank you for the cookies.

Area beauties will vie for Miss Panola crown

Summertime in March.

F drowning in the manpower pool in the state, the demand for manpower is at an all-time high. The unemployment rate is low, and the local economy is strong. This is the time to look for a job.

Fewer jobless reflect declining labor force

Pole's Country Lumber Co. has reported the lowest employment level in the state, with a 4.5% unemployment rate. The company is continuing to hire, with job interviews held each week in February. The 29th Annual Miss Panola County Pageant will be held on Saturday, March 21, at Turner Junior College, Carthage, Texas. The Pageant will feature a variety of performers, including Miss Panola County and Miss Panola County Fair. The Pageant will also feature a talent competition, in which contestants will showcase their talents in singing, dancing, and other areas. The Pageant will conclude with a formal dinner and dance. The Pageant is open to all contestants, and eligibility requirements may vary. Interested contestants should contact Turner Junior College for more information.
The challenge in higher education

By Bill Clements

The challenge in higher education today is to maintain a balance between traditional academic values and the rapidly changing demands of the modern world. This is particularly true at the University of Texas, where the student body is diverse and the curriculum is constantly evolving.

One of the biggest challenges is to ensure that all students have access to quality education. This requires a commitment to improving facilities, increasing funding, and attracting talented faculty. At UT, we have made significant progress in these areas, but there is always more work to be done.

Another challenge is to prepare students for success in the workforce. The job market is changing rapidly, and we need to ensure that our graduates have the skills they need to be successful. This requires a focus on practical training and experiential learning.

Finally, we need to address the issue of affordability. Higher education costs have increased dramatically in recent years, and many students are struggling to pay for college. This is a problem that affects not only those who are attending college, but also their families.

Despite these challenges, I remain committed to providing a top-notch education for all students. We will continue to strive for excellence in teaching, research, and service, and we will always be open to new ideas and innovative approaches.

State's superpowers worry with budget

By Great Williams

The Board of Directors of Texas State University System on Monday, March 21, 1988, have decided to merge their three campuses into one, effective immediately.

The decision, which was prompted by a recent budget crisis, will result in the current campuses being phased out, and the new campus will be located in San Antonio.

The merger will also result in the closing of several departments, including the School of Business, the School of Engineering, and the School of Law.

The intégration of the three campuses will be managed by a new president, to be appointed by the Board of Directors.

The new campus will be located on the former site of the Main Campus, and will be known as the Texas State University System.

The decision has been met with mixed reactions from students, faculty, and staff.

Some have welcomed the change, seeing it as an opportunity for the university to become more efficient and effective.

Others have expressed concern over the loss of their departments, and the impact it will have on their education and career prospects.

The Board of Directors has assured the public that all students currently enrolled at the three campuses will be accommodated at the new campus.

However, many students have expressed concern over the possibility of losing their scholarships and financial aid.

The merger is expected to take place in phases, with the final phase scheduled to be completed by the end of the fiscal year.

All employees, students, and members of the university community are encouraged to participate in the transition process.

The Board of Directors will host a series of town hall meetings to discuss the merger, and to provide an opportunity for input from the university community.

The meetings will be held in the upcoming weeks, and will be announced on the university's website.

Ag development legislation promises new jobs, $650 million more income

By T. M. Wilson

House Speaker Guy Lewis said the state's agriculture industry will benefit from the legislation. The House Republican leadership yesterday introduced a package of bills and resolutions that would give the state's agricultural industry a $650 million boost in new income by 1982.

The legislation would provide tax incentives for agricultural production, encourage the development of new agricultural products and services, and increase the state's agricultural exports.

Lewis said the legislation would also benefit rural communities by providing new jobs and increasing economic development.

The legislation includes provisions for grants and loans to agricultural producers, tax credits for investments in agricultural research and development, and increased funding for the state's agricultural extension service.

Lewis said the legislation would help the state's agricultural industry compete more effectively with other states and countries for a share of the national and international market.

He said the legislation would also help to ensure the continued growth and development of the state's agricultural industry.

The legislation is expected to be debated in detail in the House during the next several weeks.
