BY MRS. CLOIS BAKER

April 30, only three members of the Murrah family, William, his wife, and their granddaughter, Helen, survived the explosion. Their son, John, and his wife, Jane, were killed in the blast. The family was planning to continue their business at the same location, but their plans were changed when the building was destroyed. The family lost everything, including their home and their business. They now live in a rented apartment in the same neighborhood. The family has been very active in the community and continue to support local charities. Their son, John, was a successful businessman and had plans to expand his business. The family is now in the process of rebuilding their lives and moving on. They are very supportive of each other and continue to give back to the community.

Austin highlights:
Clements, Hobby continue budget-tax war

By John S. Wood
The Austin American-Statesman

The Texas House yesterday approved a budget that contains a provision that would increase the state's sales tax from 4.5% to 4.75%.

The budget, which was approved by a vote of 100-0, will be sent to Senate Finance Committee, which will consider it before sending it to the Senate for consideration.

The House vote came after a long debate in which representatives on both sides of the issue made impassioned arguments.

"This is a good bill," said Rep. John B. Zerby, R-Houston, who voted yes. "It will help us provide adequate education for our children."

"This is a bad bill," he said. "It will hurt our businesses and cost us jobs."

The budget includes a provision that would increase the state's sales tax from 4.5% to 4.75%. The revenue generated by the increase would be used to fund education programs.

The bill also includes a provision that would allow local school districts to increase property taxes by up to 2 cents per $100 of valuation.

The House approved the budget by a vote of 100-0. The bill now goes to the Senate Finance Committee, which will consider it before sending it to the Senate for consideration.

The Senate is expected to begin work on the budget soon.

Timber harvests to increase

A new management plan designed to guide the harvest of timber in the Forests and Grasslands of Texas has been completed. It replaces the previous plan that was in effect for over 20 years and permits a more balanced use of the available timber. The new plan allows for increased yields and better management of the forest resources. It also provides for the protection of wildlife habitats and the conservation of natural resources.

Local man kidnapped

A Carthage man was kidnaped and held captive in Caddo until he was killed. According to a police report, the victim was last seen alive on Main Street in Carthage. He was later found dead in a field outside the city limits.

Watch for pool scams

By John Motley

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Bob McFadden has warned about the growing trend of pool scams. These schemes involve individuals offering to build or maintain pools for a fee and then disappearing without completing the work. Consumers are advised to be cautious and to require a written contract before making a payment.

Non-stop trucking approved by RRC

Robert Jenness, a veteran long-distance trucker, says that the new approval by the RRC to operate non-stop for 1,000 miles is a great improvement. He feels that it will allow drivers to be more efficient and make more deliveries.

Oil demand increases

Global market prices in June averaged 120 percent of the November level. According to the Federal Reserve, the increase in demand is due to higher temperatures and increased economic activity. The oil price increase will likely have an impact on the cost of goods for consumers.

YARD OF THE MONTH

Old-fashioned yard transplanted from Alabama

Hydrangeas, climatis, four-o'clocks, more

People whoean the Southern soil, planted home of the Tylers in May. The family has lived in Carthage for 128 years. The current home was built in 1902, and it has been passed down through generations. The Tylers' garden is a testament to their love for traditional southern plants. There are full blossoms in the garden, including a variety of four-o'clocks, climatis, and hydrangeas. The family also has a vegetable garden, which they use for their home cooking.

I guess I'll say a few things around the house. I can't say anything.

—Henry Tyler

The Tylers say the house has been in the family for 128 years. The garden has come to Carthage from New Orleans, where they have lived for several years. They had an opportunity to buy the house in New Orleans, but they decided to make a move to Carthage, Henry Tyler's hometown. They have spent many years on the property, and they have worked hard to make it a place where they can enjoy their family time. The garden is a special part of their home, and they are proud of the work they have put into it.

Every time we come back from vacation, the back of the car looks like a jungle.

—Anna Taylor

The family car is always filled with fresh produce and flowers, including hydrangeas. It's a tradition they've kept for many years. They enjoy taking the car for a drive, admiring the garden, and sharing their bounty with friends and family. The garden is also a source of pride, and they are always happy to share it with others. They believe in sharing the beauty of their garden with others, and they are always willing to help others with their plants.

Wilma Smith bakes cakes for the joy of giving

By Dorothy Hostetler

Wilma Smith of Carthage, Texas, has a special place in her heart for making cakes. She has been baking since she was a young girl, and her love for the art only grew stronger with time. Wilma's expertise is in creating a variety of cakes, from classic to modern, each with its own unique twist.

Wilma's approach to baking is simple yet effective. She starts with a pristine white cake batter, which she then divides into different bowls. Each bowl contains a different flavor, from chocolate to vanilla. She also adds a generous amount of chocolate chips and nuts to make the cakes extra rich. Wilma's cakes are moist, fluffy, and simply delicious.

Wilma's cakes are not just for personal enjoyment; she has also become a sought-after baker for events such as bake sales and bazaars. She has been participating in these events for over a decade and has built a loyal following. Her cakes are always the first to go, and her reputation for excellence is well-deserved.

Wilma's cakes are not just baked, they are a labor of love. She takes great care in selecting the ingredients, from the finest flour to the freshest eggs, and in ensuring that each cake is the perfect blend of flavors. Her cakes are a testament to her dedication and passion for baking.

Wilma's cakes are not just for display; she also enjoys the joy of giving them to others. She believes that sharing her love for baking with others is a form of giving back to the community. Her cakes are a symbol of warmth, comfort, and love, and they bring joy to everyone who tastes them.

Wilma's cakes are a true reflection of her personality. She is a hardworking, kind, and generous person, and her cakes are a reflection of that. Her cakes are a source of pride, and she takes great pleasure in sharing them with others.

For years I have made heart shaped Valentine cakes every year for the children's teachers, just because I wanted to.

—Wilma Smith

P.S. There is a secret ingredient she calls "love" that makes them the best.
