Special session's final chapter finished

Gov. Clements uses veto power

Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the final chapter of the legislature Monday afternoon when he refused to sign into law HB 1128, a bill that would have made changes to the state's pension system for retired state employees.

The governor, acting on his authority as the chief executive, signed the bill into law but also included a veto message, saying he disagreed with certain provisions of the legislation. The veto was announced at a news conference in the capitol where Clements said he had signed the bill but returned it with a rider.

The governor's action means that the bill will not become law unless the legislature overrides his veto. The deadline for doing so is Tuesday, and Clements has not yet indicated whether he will run for a third term.

The veto affects provisions that would have allowed for early retirement for state employees and increased the amount of money they could contribute to their retirement accounts.

Clements said he was concerned that the bill's provisions could lead to an increase in the state's debt and that it would costs taxpayers more money in the long run. He also expressed concern that it would create a new pension plan that would be more expensive than the current system.

The legislature had approved the bill by a large margin and many supporters of the legislation had hoped it would become law. However, Clements' veto has put the bill in doubt.

Clements' action is not unprecedented. In the past, he has vetoed legislation that he felt would be expensive for the state, including a bill that would have allowed state employees to receive additional retirement benefits.

The governor said he would continue to work with the legislature to find a solution that both he and the lawmakers could agree on.

He added that he would sign any legislation that was passed by the legislature that he felt was in the state's best interest.

Clements' action has put the state's budget in question, as the legislature had already approved spending plans for the fiscal year that begin in September. The budget includes $12.5 billion for education, $5.5 billion for health care and $3 billion for transportation.

The governor's veto could have a significant impact on the budget, as the legislature would have to find a way to fund the programs that were cut by the veto.

The legislature is scheduled to meet again on Tuesday and may consider overriding the governor's veto. The vote on the override would be along party lines, with Republicans likely to support the bill and Democrats opposed.

If the override fails, the bill would not become law and the state would be forced to operate under its current budget for the fiscal year.

In a statement following the governor's veto, House Speaker Tom Craddick said he was disappointed that the governor had vetoed the bill.

"This is an unfortunate decision by Governor Clements," Craddick said. "We believe that the legislation was good for the state and that it would have helped to reduce the state's debt.

"We will continue to work with the governor to find a solution that benefits both the state and its citizens," Craddick added.

The Senate also issued a statement, saying it was disappointed with the governor's action.

"We are disappointed with the governor's decision," Senate Majority Leader Bob Deuell said. "We believe that the legislation was good for the state and that it would have helped to reduce the state's debt.

"We will continue to work with the governor to find a solution that benefits both the state and its citizens," Deuell added.

"I'd like to invite you to dinner at my place."

As Manager of Church's Fried Chicken, I'd like to invite you to dinner at my place.

I'm very proud of the delicious, high-quality fried chicken we serve at Church's, and I am equally as proud of the friendly Church's people who serve it.

If you love your fried chicken big, tender and juicy like I do, then I know you're going to love Church's. And even though you're accepting our good food at a low Church's price, I hope you'll accept these money-saving coupons as my own personal invitation, as well as my way of saying "welcome to Church's."

Sincerely,

Strength For Living

BY JERRY BURMAN

Early on a May morning in 1975, a loving husband told his bride of his upcoming death. He had been feeling unwell for some time and had been diagnosed with cancer. The couple had two young children, a son and daughter, and they were devastated by the news. The husband wanted his family to remember him and to know that he was at peace and that they should be happy for him. He asked that they should not be sad but should rather celebrate his life.

"You can let me go now," he said, "I know I can go from here and I am not afraid," he added, "I am going to be with God." And so he did, leaving behind a legacy of love and kindness.

The couple, his wife, and their children, are now living their lives to the fullest, honoring their father's memory. They visit the grave site often, to reflect on the memories they shared with him and to remind themselves of the life he lived and the love he gave.

At the place where you worship the sermon commends
That one message meets your ways
After which you are told to remember the heed
For the work has another six days
Your devotion is sure to be duped
Where the guidance of God will abode
And with all good intentions you try to repent
For expectations are always round
But these wonderful creatures we are to ignore
For the rest of the work, we must
In fact carry them with our right out of the door
And apply them wherever you go.

Texas one-room schoolhouse did remarkably creditable job

It’s interesting that one of the most important jobs of a school is to provide an educational environment where students can learn and grow together. The one-room schoolhouse was a significant part of this process, and it served a diverse range of students in a variety of ways.

The Brookshire Bros. advertisement offers a glimpse into the kind of work that goes into running a successful school. It highlights the importance of providing a quality education at a fair price, and the attention to detail that goes into ensuring that students are well-prepared for their future.

The Vets pleads; county whacks funds anyway

The advertisement from the Panola County Post illustrates the importance of supporting our veterans and ensuring that they are provided with the resources they need to succeed. It is unfortunate that funding for these important programs is being cut, and it is essential that we find ways to continue providing support for our veterans in the future.

The TREASURE CHEST advertisement offers a list of valuable items that are available for purchase. It emphasizes the importance of finding ways to support education and ensure that students have access to the resources they need to succeed.

The Henderson Ford advertisement highlights the importance of providing quality service and support to customers. It demonstrates the value of investing in local businesses, and the benefits that can be gained through doing so.

Overall, these advertisements demonstrate the importance of supporting education and our veterans, and the value that can be gained through supporting local businesses.
