Social Security insurance credit must be earned

Our society believes that Social Security is a system of earned benefits that require individuals to work and contribute throughout their lives. The Social Security Administration (SSA) tracks the number of credits an individual has earned, which determines their eligibility for benefits. These credits are based on a person's earnings and vary depending on the year they were earned. To receive full benefits, an individual typically needs 40 credits, which is equivalent to 10 years of work. However, circumstances such as disability, early retirement, or death of a spouse can allow individuals to qualify for benefits with fewer credits. The importance of earning Social Security credits cannot be overstated, as they serve as a benchmark for determining eligibility for benefits. It is crucial to understand how Social Security credits are earned and how they impact retirement planning.
Girl Scouts spread sunshine to U.S. troops in Persian Gulf

As part of the requirements for their "Seven Days of Service" project, Carthage Girl Scouts were asked to make cookies to be sent to the U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf. The project is a part of the "Seven Days of Service" campaign that encourages youth to help others.

Helen Smith and her daughter, Janie, are the leaders of the Girl Scout troop. They said they are proud of their girls for going above and beyond to help those in need.

"We want our girls to know that they have the power to make a difference," Helen said. "By sending these cookies, we are giving them a chance to show their appreciation for the men and women who are serving our country."

The cookies were packed in boxes and sent to the U.S. military in the Persian Gulf. The girls were happy to be able to help in any way they could.

"It feels good to know that our cookies are helping to spread some sunshine to the troops," Janie said. "We hope they enjoy them as much as we enjoyed making them."

The Girl Scouts are planning to do more projects like this in the future, and hope to continue to make a positive impact on their community.

Carthage struggle produces 5-5 mark

When the season began, Carthage coaches expected a few tough games, and they weren't disappointed. The Cougars played well against some of the best teams in the state, but they struggled to find their rhythm.

"We knew it was going to be a difficult season," Coach Ryan Smith said. "But we also knew that we had the talent to compete with anyone."

The Cougars lost their first game of the season against the defending state champions, but they fought hard and showed improvement in their next few games.

"We're getting better every week," Smith said. "We're learning how to work together and execute our game plan."

The Cougars struggled against some of the weaker teams, but they were able to defeat some strong opponents. They lost two games, but they also won two.

"It's been a tough season," Smith said. "But we've learned a lot from our losses."

The Cougars played their best game of the season against their biggest rival, the Carthage Tigers. The game was tied at 5-5 when the final horn sounded.

"That was a tough one," Smith said. "But we played our hardest and never gave up."

The Cougars are looking forward to their next game, and they hope to continue to improve.

"We're excited to see how we can do against some of the stronger teams," Smith said. "But we're going to take it one game at a time."

Henderson, Palestine to represent south zone

Some teams would rather be in the south zone than the north. The south zone is known for its tough competition, but Henderson and Palestine are happy to be there.

"The north zone is full of strong teams," Henderson coach Mark Lombardi said. "But the south zone is even tougher."

The Cougars and Lions are both looking forward to the upcoming season. They hope to continue to improve and compete at the highest level.

"We're excited to see how we can do against some of the stronger teams," Lombardi said. "But we're going to take it one game at a time."
