Thanksgiving in 1895, festive, lavish

By Stanley Brede, Special to the Newsman

Claudia Ruhl was one of the many women who prepared for Thanksgiving in 1895.

The end has to be here, she thought, and she was right. After more than 50 years of hard work and sacrifice, Claudia was nearing the end of her life.

She had always loved cooking, and she was especially proud of her Thanksgiving dinner. It was a family tradition, and she wanted to make sure that it was as special as possible.

"I think my four or five star rating comes from a long line of cooks," Claudia said. "My mother had a neighbor who was a famous chef, and I learned a lot from her."

As she prepared the meal, Claudia's mind drifted back to her youth. She remembered the time she had spent as a waitress at a local restaurant, where she had learned to cook for others.

"I had to work hard to make a decent meal," Claudia recalled. "But it was worth it when I saw the smiles on people's faces."

As the meal was set on the table, Claudia's family gathered around. They were all amazed by the quantity and quality of the food. The turkey was juicy and tender, and the yams were perfectly cooked.

"This is the best Thanksgiving I've ever had," said her daughter, Leah.

"I agree," said her son, Mark. "This is the best Thanksgiving I've ever had."

Claudia smiled as she looked at her family. She knew that she had done a good job, and she was proud of herself.

"I hope this is the best Thanksgiving you've ever had," Claudia said. "I worked hard to make sure that it was."

And it was. Claudia Ruhl's Thanksgiving dinner was a huge success, and it made her family very happy.

"I will always remember my time at Carthage," McKee said. "It was a special place, and I am grateful for all the opportunities I was given."
GOLD TASTE
Amanda Choate originals bring rave reviews
Dash of daring proves good ingredient

By Dorothy Mometa

Amanda Choate, owner of the popular "Gold T" restaurant in downtown Carthage, has been making headlines for her unique and daring menu offerings. Her latest creation, a dish that combines the flavors of chili and chocolate, has left customers in awe. "I've always loved playing with flavors," Choate said. "And I thought, why not combine a spicy chili with a sweet chocolate for a bold and surprising taste?"

Choate's chili-chocolate dish has become an instant hit at the restaurant. "People come from all over the area just to try it," Choate said. "I've heard stories of people driving hours just to get a taste. It's been very exciting to see how much they love it!"

Choate credits her success to her ability to think outside the box when it comes to cooking. "I've always been drawn to cooking that's unique and unexpected," Choate said. "I think people love it because it's not just another boring plate of food. It's something new and exciting."
