Hearing on proposed center to draw crowd

By Sheryl Curbe By Sheryl Curbe

A large group of concerned citizens are expected to attend the City Council meeting Monday night and voice their opinion on the site of a new convention center community, which has been proposed to be developed on a piece of property off Dixie Lake Road in the city's West Division.

The issue has developed some support from many of the citizens within the community.

During the meeting, City Council Commissioners will decide if the land should go forward with the proposed convention center development for the project.

The government-submitted project was first approached by the City Planning and Zoning Board Dec. 7. At last time, it was rejected by the zoning board. Since then they have requested developer William B. Mulligan to make the necessary changes to the convention center development. Also during the second meeting, the citizens who have opposed the proposed project.

Oil, gas news

At a meeting of 19 members of the Oil and Gas Association held last week, it was decided not to pursue a project to develop a methane gas field in the Carthage area.

The group was formed last year to explore the possibility of a methane gas field in the area.

The meeting was attended by members of the Carthage Chamber of Commerce, the Panola County Agricultural Extension Service and the Carthage Industrial Development Corporation.

The group will now focus on developing other projects in the area.

"I think we can do a lot for Carthage," said John Brown, president of the Oil and Gas Association. "We need to get some momentum going in the gas field.

In other news, the Carthage Independent School District announced last week that it would be forced to cut 10 jobs due to a budget shortfall.

"We're doing the best we can to keep our schools open," said Superintendent Bob Miller. "We have to make some tough decisions.

The cuts will affect all levels of the district, including elementary, middle and high school.

Modern-day houseboat and home efficiency expert for natural gas heat

Call me thick-skinned, but I've always loved winter best... Those days when the first cold particles fill the air, awakening the receptors. Nights standing around the fire, our cheeks taking on a silvery glow. Feeling reflective. Literally.

Of course, winter wouldn't be bearable without our ever reliable, highly-efficient natural gas heat. For eons, it's been the only energy choice... and still, some humans don't realize that an efficient gas furnace can heat two and one half times the space that electric heating can... for the same amount of primary energy... thus saving hundreds of dollars a year. To those creatures, I recommend that they contact their nearest Entex utility station. As for me, I'm off to curl up with selections from my favorite poet, Robert Frost.
