Jack Ellett

Sherriff

Dear Voter:

On Super Tuesday, March 8th, you will have an opportunity to participate in the election to elect who will be the next Sheriff of Panola County. I hope you will vote for me. Part of that is self-interest. After giving more than 20 years of my life to service to my fellow man, including combat duty in Viet Nam and after having spent over eight years serving the people of Panola County, first as a Deputy, then Investigator, and since November 1999 as your Sheriff, there is no honor which could be bestowed on me that would fill me with more pride than for you to elect me as your Sheriff.

Mostly, I want to be your Sheriff because in my heart I know I will be a good Sheriff. In spite of all our efforts during the next four years in Panola County, there will be people murdered, murders broken into, and businesses robbed. There will be crime, and there will be need for psychiatric help, children who will experiment with alcohol and drugs and become involved, and I believe that those need to be cut off at the knee. There will be some in the office who are not as good as they should be, and I believe that you will want them to be cleaned up. And I believe that you will want their positions filled with new people who are more capable. In the next four years, there will be new ideas, and there will be new mistakes. You will have to make some mistakes, and you will have to be patient.

Sincerely,
Presidential material

Good morning. The New Hampshire primary is in two days, and the candidates are scrambling to get their message out. Some are focusing on their home states, while others are trying to make waves in other key battlegrounds. It's a critical time for all of them, as the first votes in the primary season will set the tone for what's to come.

In New Hampshire, the focus is on the state's history of being a bellwether in presidential elections. The state has a high number of presidential primaries, and its results have often been predictive of what will happen in more populous states. This year, however, the state is facing some challenges. With the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

On the other side of the country, in Texas, the candidates are focusing on the state's diverse population and its potential impact on the election. With a growing number of voters of color, the candidates are trying to appeal to this demographic. The state's primary is on March 3, and the candidates are hoping to get as many votes as possible to solidify their standing in the race.

In South Carolina, the focus is on the state's Black voters, who make up a significant portion of the electorate. With the primaries in South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

In Florida, the focus is on the state's large Hispanic and Asian population. With the primaries in Florida, California, and Nevada all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

In California, the focus is on the state's large Asian population. With the primaries in California, Texas, and Florida all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

In Nevada, the focus is on the state's large Hispanic population. With the primaries in Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

In Arizona, the focus is on the state's large Hispanic population. With the primaries in Arizona, Nevada, and California all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

In Maine, the focus is on the state's large Hispanic population. With the primaries in Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont all happening in the same month, the candidates are hoping to gain momentum in the region. However, with the coronavirus pandemic still ongoing, there are concerns about the safety of in-person voting. Some candidates are advocating for mail-in ballots, while others are pushing for early voting.

Texas Utilities Electric wins award

Texas Utilities Electric Company has been awarded the "Utility of the Year" award by the American Public Power Association. The company received the award for its outstanding service and dedication to its customers. The award was presented at the annual meeting of the association in Austin this week.

The "Utility of the Year" award is given to a utility that demonstrates excellence in customer service, reliability, and financial performance. Texas Utilities Electric was chosen for its commitment to providing reliable and affordable electricity to its customers, as well as for its efforts to improve the environment.

The company has been recognized for its leadership in renewable energy initiatives, including the development of wind and solar power facilities. It is also a leader in energy efficiency programs, offering customers incentives to reduce their energy usage.

"We are honored to receive this prestigious award," said Jim Thompson, President and CEO of Texas Utilities Electric. "This recognition is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our employees and the trust placed in us by our customers. We will continue to work hard to provide reliable and affordable electricity while also being good stewards of the environment."

NEXT TIME SOMEONE COMPLAINS ABOUT THE SALES TAX - ASK THEM IF THEY LIKE PROPERTY TAXES BETTER

That was the choice Senator Anderson had to make. In order to build more parks and recreation centers, the state needs to maintain quality education - fix $1.5 billion deficit - and adequately provide for our elderly, we had to raise money at the State level or pass the back to the local property owners.

ANYBODY WHO TELLS YOU DIFFERENT IS PROMISING YOU A FREE LUNCH - AND WE ALL KNOW WHAT THATS WORTH

WHILE YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT TAXES REMEMBER THESE

- Senator Anderson killed 6% tax on all insurance premiums
- Senator Anderson killed 6% tax on all service including medical
- Senator Anderson killed 6% tax on all field servicing
- Senator Anderson killed 1% tax on all real estate transfers

Kirkley addresses supporters

"I am stretching out my hand to all Americans. This will not be a campaign of one small, well-organized minority. It will be a campaign to capture the hearts of the American people. There is a movement in this nation, a grass roots movement, and it is growing. It is a movement to recapture the greatness of America."

Rabbits are in, ducks out

By Dorothy Marie Smith

Go outside and look for a few ducks floating in one of our many local ponds. They're quite rare these days, you know, except for the odd duck that's been able to beat the cold and snow and live through another winter. Ducks are not exactly the symbol of spring and new life, are they? They're more the symbol of winter and cold.

But rabbits, oh rabbits! They're the symbols of spring and new life! They're everywhere! You can see them hopping around in the fields, in the woods, and even in the yards. It's amazing how they can adapt to their environment.

Young singers bring home medals

THREE SUNSET VALLEY HIGH-SCHOOLERS took home medals from the Texas Music Educators Association (TMEA). The participation of the students didn’t compare against their academic success. They competed in effect against themselves.

Making the point, the contest was in the area of academics such as band, vocal, and drama. The winners are pictured here, popular brands and names. No two musicians were alike.

GIRL SCOUTS ANNIVERSARY
March 7-11

Girl Scout offers chance for learning, growing, caring

They come around every year like one of the four seasons, selling cookies with innocent eyes and empty pockets. This is what the Girl Scouts and during Girl Scout Week, March 7-11, they will be turning on the charm once again to continue their annual girl-to-girl cookie bash.

But, Girl Scouting is more than just selling cookies. It's a learning experience.

"Girl Scouting is a character building organization," said Patty Hunter, a veteran leader of six years. "Through Girl Scouts, girls learn about themselves, their community and the world."

A girl with a ticket scurrying when they are five or in kindergarten is not the level of sophistication it takes. From Daisy girls, gift all the way to Brownies, Hen Juniors and Juniors in the Bigs, each troop has an average of 15 members.

This year, several troops joined together to spread happiness to the community in the form of Girl Scouts in Christmas sets. Each troop banded together to create and decorated cards and sent them to the troops. This project enriched the girls in every way. They have learned to be "streamers and decorations" said Mary Hayes, Daisy leader.

Terry Abernathy, one of the three Junior Girl Scout leaders, said she was "thrilled with the response on the different events." She said most troops sent the cards to help bring a smile and bring a little excitement into the way the community and the world work. "We want to have children to be a Girl Scout leader," Aber
