1987 hospital audit OK'd
PGH fiscal year better than '86

Adjustments by Medical Groups in PGH

Material savings of $181,400 in 1987, the final audit of the fiscal year, produced significant savings for the hospital. This figure represents a significant improvement over the previous year, when total savings amounted to more than $120,000.

The hospital's board of managers accepted the final audit report at their meeting on April 14. The financial summary was prepared by the local CPA firm of Chapman, Robinson and Rela.

According to the firm's findings, PGH's operating expenses in 1987 amounted to approximately $181,400. This represents a significant improvement over the previous year, when financial losses due to local hospital functions showed a total of approximately $30,000 for the year.

"It's something that Medicare does at the end of every year," explained hospital administrator Billy Don York. "They make audits and see what they could have done to reduce our costs. These savings have not been realized in full during the year by some $181,400. So, we were required to pay them back. Otherwise, we would have lost even more money.

York said the final audit of the hospital board has been getting better for the past three years that can be attributed, he said, to improvements in such areas as staff training, medical services and increased efficiency by the community in the use of the hospital.

In 1987, Phoenix General Hospital reported total revenues from operations of $94 million and total operating expenses of $99 million. Comparison to net operating losses of $19.6 million for 1985 is a significant improvement. The average daily census of patients at Phoenix General Hospital was 4,350.

Texas Democrats to play role in U.S. campaigns

By Linda Williams

AUSTIN TOppers among the campaign trail, Albert Goss made a question, drawing a question mark of interest to himself. He had told his friends about the time when he was growing up in West Texas and how his family had to travel to San Antonio to vote because they were Democrats. He thought it was ironic that the Democrats were now the ones who were being shut out of power.

One Last Chance

In the wake of the 2010 elections, the Democratic Party is looking for an opportunity to make a comeback. One of the key issues facing the party is the lack of diversity in its leadership. According to the data, Democrats are more likely to be older, white, and male.

In this election cycle, Democrats have been focusing on issues such as healthcare, education, and the economy. However, many experts believe that the party needs to do more to attract younger voters.

The party is also facing challenges in the South and West, where it has traditionally been weaker. In these regions, the Republicans have been gaining ground and now control both houses of Congress.

In order to succeed in these areas, the Democrats will need to develop a more inclusive message and work to build new alliances with other groups.

Grafting produces quality pecans

By Beverly Corbey

Approximately 50 pecan trees will be grafted on the grounds of the Carthage ISD Elementary School this week. The grafting is being done by the school's agriculture department. Trees planted in the past have not produced pecans, and the goal of the grafting is to improve the quality of the fruit. The new trees are being grafted in the fall to allow the sap to flow through the branches. They will be transplanted in the spring to the school's garden area.

Pik latest junk bond

Reported by Tom Cruise

Local junk bond issuance fell dramatically in the fourth quarter of 1988, as the market turmoil and rising interest rates deterred issuers. There was a sharp decline in the amount of junk bonds sold, as well as a decrease in their interest rates. Many issuers found it difficult to raise funds at reasonable rates, and some were forced to restructure their debt.

Homemaking today is complex challenge

Home economics teaching includes many areas of skill, knowledge

By Dorothy Shepherd

Homemaking today is a complex challenge. It requires a wide range of skills and knowledge. Homemakers must be proficient in cooking, sewing, cleaning, and gardening. They must also be able to manage their time effectively and keep a clean and organized home.

Boy's aren't embarrassed to take homemaking. Today, many boys are taking homemaking classes in high school. They learn how to cook, clean, and do laundry. They also learn how to manage their time and money.
