Standing tall above Panola County
Old Glory will wave free–and high–this Fourth Of July. The banner now flying in front of the new Donald Griffin Construction Co. plant on the loop in Carthage is believed to be the highest flying flag in the county. It was raised last week, just in time to celebrate America's Independence Day.

Local firemen seek back on fireworks

By Sandy Young

While shooting fireworks is a traditional part of the Fourth of July celebration, firearms throughout Panola County are feared that firing bottle rockets, roman candles, fire cracker, and other pyrotechnics could start a fire on the dry conditions in the area.

Although no one has fired fireworks has been issued, firehouses in the Carthage, Bethel, Beall, Community Hall and Forest Hill Volunteer Fire Department, are keeping a close eye on the dry fields during the Fourth of July festivities.

Fourth of July closings

All banks, post offices, city hall and post office will be closed Monday, July 4. Only the Central Pharmacy and Post Office will be open.

Water Babies teaches toddlers to respect, enjoy swimming

By Sandy Young

It was a very busy day in early June, when appearance of babies by the dozens for their first swimming lesson, as they entered into the cool waters of Carthage Municipal Pool. It was plain to see what they knew about the water.

The children, some with parents and some on their own, were taken care of by the staff, and taught the basics of swimming, breathing, and listening to directions of their coaches.

During the two-week course, parents are taught to hold and blow out the child, how to properly pump and move the child out of the pool.

Water Babies teaches children the first three years to three years and six months, and the school teaches babies and toddlers because they have not yet learned to the natural curiosity of children in the pool. The children are taught to jump and jump into the water, to the lovely sounds of the water and then to look and then to swim.

Songy says fireworks unlikely at convention

By Dorothy Martin

The 50th General Convention of the Episcopal Church ended last week with a big bang, literally. Fireworks are a traditional part of the Episcopal Church's celebration of its annual convention, but this year, firework enthusiasts were disappointed to learn that the convention would have to forego its usual pyrotechnic display due to safety concerns.

The decision was made after months of planning and consultation with safety experts. The convention organizers wanted to ensure that the display would be safe for all attendees and that it would not cause any harm to the surrounding community.

The decision was not an easy one, as fireworks are an important part of the convention's tradition. However, the safety of all attendees was the priority, and the decision was made to cancel the fireworks display.

Songy, who is known for his love of fireworks, was disappointed by the decision but understood the need for safety. "I was really looking forward to the fireworks," he said. "But I understand why they had to cancel them. Safety is always the most important thing."
