rural neighborhoods may become city dwellers

By Stevely Young Staff Writer

People in rural areas of the state are already beginning to feel the impact of an increasing population. In fact, it is estimated that by 2018, the state will have more than 10 million people living in rural areas. This is a significant increase from the current population of just over 8.5 million.

The increase in population is due to a number of factors, including the growth of urban areas, the influx of people from other states, and the increasing popularity of rural lifestyles. As a result, there has been a significant increase in the number of people moving to rural areas in search of a more relaxed lifestyle.

There are also several benefits to living in rural areas, such as lower cost of living, more space, and a slower pace of life. However, there are also some challenges, such as limited access to services and facilities, and a lack of economic opportunities.

Despite these challenges, many people are choosing to move to rural areas because of the benefits they offer. As a result, there is a growing trend towards urbanization, with rural neighborhoods becoming city dwellers.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I was one of the people who voted for Panola County Water District Measure A last November. I am writing to voice my displeasure about the present situation with the above district. Many of the people who voted for this measure expected it to provide a uniform water supply, free of charge, and free from the old inequities. I am reminded of the story of the blind men and the elephant, where each man touched a different part of the animal and each had a different idea of what it was. Each of us in the district has a different idea about what the district will provide and who is responsible for its operation. I believe that this situation is caused by a lack of communication and a lack of understanding of the scope and nature of the district. I hope that the board of directors will take steps to resolve these problems.

Sincerely,

Earning changes need reporting

to Social Security

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concern about the way changes in earnings are reported to Social Security. I believe that there is a need for a more transparent and accountable process. Currently, changes in earnings are reported to Social Security through the employer, and there is no requirement for the employer to verify the accuracy of the information. I believe that this system is outdated and needs to be updated. I hope that the Social Security Administration will consider implementing a system that requires employers to verify the accuracy of the information before it is reported to Social Security.

Sincerely,

New trade policy would eliminate 'big bites'

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my support for a new trade policy that would eliminate 'big bites' from the trade agreements. I believe that this policy is necessary to ensure that the benefits of trade are shared equitably and that the costs are not borne disproportionately by the working class. I believe that the current trade policy is biased in favor of the wealthy and powerful, and that it is time for a change.

Sincerely,

The Rev. Ruth Hickman heads new Church of Nazarene

Minister says God's 'dealing' brought her here

By Jerry Burnaman

The Rev. Ruth Hickman heads the new Church of Nazarene in Panola County. The church, which opened this month, is located at 111 W. Main St.

Although Hickman has been a minister for over 30 years, this is her first time heading a church on her own. "I've been blessed to serve in a variety of positions in the church, but this is a new experience," she said.

Hickman, who grew up in a family of ministers, said she feels a deep sense of calling to serve the community. "It's not about me or what I want, it's about serving the Lord and serving the community," she said.

Hickman said the church is still in the process of building and expanding, but she is hopeful for the future. "We're excited to be here and to serve the community," she said.

She encouraged the community to come and see what the church has to offer. "Come and see for yourself," she said. "We have so much to offer, and we're excited to share it with you."
