Miss Miller opens one of gifts received at PCH building dedication; well-wishers look on.

By Dorothy Hoelte Staff Writer

An estimated 200 people crowded into the foyer and front hallway of Panola Junior College's administration building on Thursday afternoon to hear the dedication of the Chestnut Memorial Building. The event was only one portion of the dedication ceremony, which also included the unveiling of a plaque housing the names of donors. The plaque was presented to the Chestnut Memorial Building Committee.

The plaque was not the only event of the day. A dedication ceremony continued throughout the afternoon and into the evening. There was also a special dedication ceremony held at the Chestnut Memorial Hospital in Nacogdoches. This was one of the events that was held at the hospital.

At the dedication ceremony, Miss Miller was joined by former students and friends. There were also representatives from other local organizations, including the Panola Junior College Alumni Association.

Council of governments sets Aug. 31 deadline

By John Coleman Waldo Volunteers have been working for months to improve the effectiveness of the council of governments. The council is an organization of local government officials whose goal is to improve communication and cooperation among local government agencies.

The council is currently working on a plan to improve the communication between the various agencies. The plan includes a series of meetings between the agencies to discuss issues and develop solutions.

The council is hoping to have the plan finalized by the end of August. The agency leaders are hopeful that the plan will be successful and will help to improve the communication between the agencies.

If so, now’s the time to get an energy efficient electric heat pump. After all, the heat pump is the most efficient, economical and safest way to cool and heat your home. The heat pump cooks your home in the summer and heats it in the winter, all from one unit. You’re actually using two systems in one. So, if you’re thinking about replacing your current air conditioner, get the air conditioner that heats, too - the energy efficient electric heat pump.

Harris Chapel News

There was a music and prayer service on Sunday morning at the church. The service was held at 11 a.m. There were many people present, and the music was excellent. The choir sang a beautiful selection, and the minister delivered a touching sermon about the importance of faith and community. The service was followed by a delicious luncheon in the fellowship hall, and everyone enjoyed the food and each other's company. The church is planning more events in the future, so keep an eye out for updates.

Nellie Allums cites ethical values, boys in class, fast foods

World of home economics said vastly changed

By Dorothy Harlee

Nellie Allums was the first ever home economics teacher in Carthage, Missouri. She taught at Carthage High School from 1962 to 1987. Despite her dedication to teaching, the world of home economics has changed significantly since her time.

Nellie Allums says that when she first began teaching, home economics was seen as a practical subject for girls and women. However, over the years, the subject has evolved to become a more diverse and inclusive field.

"When I first started teaching home economics, it was primarily focused on cooking and sewing," Nellie says. "But as the years went on, the curriculum expanded to include more topics like nutrition, budgeting, and personal finance." She adds that the modern field of home economics is more focused on empowering students to make informed decisions about their own health and well-being.

Despite the changes, Nellie remains committed to teaching students about the importance of good nutrition. "Even in today's world, nutrition is still crucial," she says. "I try to make sure my students understand the importance of eating a balanced diet, and how small changes in their eating habits can make a big difference in their health."
