Otwell, cohorts blitz Carthage, vow to fight law with scripture

By Dorothy Merkle Staff Writer

The Rev. W. W. Otwell—a prominent Carthage resident who is famous or infamous, depending on the side, said he and his group of followers had left the town and were gathering outside to protest the arrest of Robert B. "Buck" Mattox on charges of conspiracy to kill a police officer.

"We're not going to let him get away with this," Otwell said. "We're going to fight back, no matter what it takes."

The W. W. Otwell church, with its distinctive white steeple and red-brick walls, stands on a hill overlooking the small town of Carthage. The church has been in the family for generations and is considered a landmark by many residents.

"I've been coming here since I was a kid," said James Sneed, a long-time member of the church. "I've seen it all change over the years, but this church is still the same."

Crowd applauds as missiles sputter

By Paul Martin Staff Writer

The missiles were launched from a nearby base during a training exercise, but they failed to achieve their target.

"We're witnessing this day — another unique moment in the career of a man, a moment when the history of the world is about to change," said Vice President Bush, who witnessed the event.

Mason learned from 'bad teachers'

By Sandy Young Staff Writer

Mason has a teaching philosophy that emphasizes the importance of understanding the material and applying it to real-world situations. He believes that students should not just memorize information, but rather understand the concepts and be able to apply them in practical situations.

"I try to make my classes as engaging and interactive as possible," Mason said. "I want to create an environment where students feel comfortable asking questions and participating in discussions."

Starting a teaching career in Gary

Mason graduated from Purdue University with a degree in education and immediately began teaching at the high school level.

"I never thought I would end up teaching," Mason said. "I always thought I would be doing something more exciting, like writing or acting. But teaching has turned out to be the perfect fit for me."

This fall, after a mere 40 years of service to the county, Panola County sheriff and Panola County police chief James Sneed retired. He was succeeded by his son, Sheriff James Sneed Jr., who is a 1986 graduate of Midwestern State University.

"I'm proud of my son and how he's taken over the family business," Sneed said. "I know he'll do just as good of a job as I have been doing for all these years."

Elvis may live, but what a bore!

By Fred Young

I have no reason to doubt the veracity of those who say Elvis Presley is alive and well. In fact, I know of at least one source that says he is alive and well. The source is the Presley family, and they say that Elvis is alive and well.

The young are different at funerals

At funerals, the young are different from the old. The young are more likely to cry, and they are more likely to hug each other. The old are more likely to be quiet, and they are more likely to pray. The young are more likely to talk about the deceased, and they are more likely to talk about their own lives. The old are more likely to talk about the deceased, and they are more likely to talk about their own lives. The young are more likely to be physically active, and they are more likely to be emotionally active. The old are more likely to be physically inactive, and they are more likely to be emotionally inactive. The young are more likely to be spontaneous, and they are more likely to be impulsive. The old are more likely to be predictable, and they are more likely to be predictable. The young are more likely to be social, and they are more likely to be social. The old are more likely to be solitary, and they are more likely to be solitary.

Strength For Living

Our world is in an old building that's falling with age and decay. The windows are dusty, the walls are cracked, and the floor is creaky. Yet, it's a testament to the strengths of the people who have lived here before us.
