Bush ‘Jr. Varsity’ hits town

George W. Bush signs an autograph for a supporter

By Phil Minor

George W. Bush is a man with a plan.

In a quiet moment in his campaign office in Dallas, Texas, he is outlining his vision for the future of the United States. Bush, the Republican candidate for the 2000 presidential election, is determined to make a difference in American politics.

Bush’s campaign has been characterized by a focus on issues such as education, health care, and the economy. His approach is based on the idea that the key to a better future is by investing in the people of the country. Bush believes that education is the key to a brighter tomorrow, and he is committed to making sure that every child has access to a quality education.

Bush’s plan includes increasing funding for schools, improving teacher training, and providing more resources for students. He also wants to make sure that every child has access to health care, and he plans to work towards universal health care coverage.

In addition to these issues, Bush is also committed to promoting economic growth. He believes that a strong economy is essential for a better future, and he plans to work with Congress to create job opportunities and stimulate growth.

Bush’s campaign has been well-received by voters across the country. His message of hope and change has resonated with people of all backgrounds, and he has gained a significant amount of support in the polls.

As the campaign continues, Bush will be focusing on reaching out to voters and making his case for a brighter future. He is committed to working hard to ensure that every American has a voice in the decisions that affect their lives. Bush believes that together, we can create a better tomorrow for all.

Kids’ world at Pottlatch: games, clowns, more!

War in Iraq, Indian sunbathes, decoers, clowns and a special appearance by Ronald McDonald made children who attended the seventh annual Pottlatch festival Oct. 15-16 at Centralia’s Market Park.

Linda King, chairman of the children’s area, promises lots of fun and diversion for the children, who will be active all day.

"It is a special event for children of all ages, and we guarantee that they will have a wonderful time," King said.

The event kicked off Friday evening with a special appearance by Ronald McDonald, who stopped by to visit with children and hand out gifts.

On Saturday, the Children’s Area featured a variety of activities, including a children’s parade, a children’s pet show, and a children’s art exhibit. Children also had the chance to play games, have their faces painted, and attend workshops on a variety of topics.

The Children’s Area was a hit with children of all ages, who enjoyed the fun and excitement of the event. The festival was a huge success, and it is sure to be remembered by all who attended.

Candidates meet with Post

Dukakis, Bentsen talk policy

By Sandy Young

Pamela Grizzell, a Republican candidate for Congress in the Fourth District, met with the Post on Tuesday to discuss the issues facing the country and the role of Congress.

"I believe that we need to work together to find solutions to the problems that face our country," Grizzell said.

"I am committed to fighting for the issues that matter to people in our district, and I will work hard to represent them in Congress," she added.

Grizzell spoke about a variety of issues, including health care, education, and the economy. She discussed her plans to work with her colleagues in Congress to find solutions to these problems, and she emphasized the importance of bipartisanship in finding a way forward.

Grizzell also spoke about her experience as a businesswoman and her commitment to serving the people of the Fourth District. She said that she would work hard to be a voice for the people of her district in Congress, and she emphasized the importance of listening to the concerns of her constituents.

Grizzell’s visit to the Post was a part of her campaign efforts to reach out to the people of the Fourth District. She is running against incumbent Congressman Joe Wilson, and she is hoping to win the race for the seat.

She said that she would work hard to be a voice for the people of the Fourth District, and she emphasized the importance of listening to the concerns of her constituents.

Beckville burglar gets ‘life’

By Sandy Young

Billy Young is serving a life sentence for the murder of JamesGroups, a fellow inmate at the Texas Prison for Men in Huntsville.

Young was convicted of the murder in 1998, and was sentenced to life in prison. He is currently serving his sentence at the Texas Prison for Men in Huntsville.

Young’s case has been the subject of much media attention, and he has been the focus of several legal battles. He has been represented by several attorneys, and he has been refused parole on multiple occasions.

Young said that he wasRateful for the opportunity to serve his sentence, and he said that he would use his time in prison to reflect on his past mistakes and to make amends for the harm that he caused. He said that he would work hard to be a better person and to make a positive change in his life.

Young’s case has been a source of controversy, and there have been calls for his release from prison. However, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles has refused to grant him parole, and he is currently serving his sentence.

Brady undergoes surgery

Carter, Tennessee - Tennessee Titans' center Kevin Moore underwent surgery today for a torn labrum in his left shoulder. Moore, who has been sidelines the past few weeks due to the injury, is expected to be sidelined for several more weeks. The surgery was performed by Dr. James Andrews in Birmingham, Alabama. Moore is hoping to return to action before the end of the season, but will need a few more weeks to recover. He's expected to miss at least four games, leaving the Titans with a key player on the sideline. The Titans are currently 2-2 for the season and hope to have Moore back soon to bolster their offensive line.

Dukakis' campaign

The Dukakis campaign was gearing up on Wednesday to respond to the Bush campaign's attack on the Massachusetts senator's record. Dukakis had been called a "tax cheat" by Bush, but the campaign denied that he had ever evaded taxes. "The Washington Post" reported that Dukakis had failed to report income from a trust that had been set up for his wife's welfare. The campaign argued that the trust was a legal way to avoid paying taxes on income from investments. Bush had been trying to make Dukakis look weak on ethics. Dukakis supporters pointed out that Bush's own record was not spotless on the issue. "There's a fundamental difference between us," Dukakis said. "I believe in tax fairness and that we should pay our fair share. Bush believes in tax cuts for the wealthy and that's what his policies are all about."

Ratliff fundraiser planned

A student fundraiser for Bill Ratliff, the Democratic candidate for Texas lieutenant governor, is scheduled for Nov. 5. The event will be held at the Panola County Post office and will feature live music, food, and games. Ratliff is running on a platform of jobs, education, and rural issues. The fundraiser is being organized by local volunteers and is expected to be a major boost to Ratliff's campaign. "I'm thrilled to have this opportunity to give back to the community and support a candidate who's fighting for the people," said one volunteer. "We're looking forward to a great evening and hope to raise a lot of money." Ratliff is running against incumbent David Dewhurst in the November election.

A short column for a long night

There was talk of a short column. It is now a long one. "Long Night of Unhappiness." It's a delight for those reading it and a disaster for those who have been writing it. A delight for those who have written it and a disaster for those who have read it. A delight for those who have read it and a disaster for those who have written it. And the night seems a long one.

Strictly Personal

All in a gumbel? Feak your way out!

To the editor:

Clarifying Biggs' status

Editor:

The country weekly has a new type of identification. It's called a "Gumbel." I know this because I have seen one in action. A Gumbel is a person who is not a pirate. A Gumbel is a person who is not a pirate. A Gumbel is a person who is not a pirate. A Gumbel is a person who is not a pirate.

I am writing to point out that people who personate something are not necessarily in a position to demonstrate their identity. In the case of the "Gumbel," it may be that this individual is actually a pirate. To further support this argument, I would like to present evidence that suggests the "Gumbel" is not a pirate.

I have heard that pirates are not welcome on this island. That is why I am writing to you. I would like to know if there is any truth to this rumor.

Sincerely,

Antonious D. Johnson

Holland tells of county's oldest congregation

The happening history of the Allison United Methodist Church, oldest in the county, is narrated by its pastor, Rev. Dr. James R. Holland, who resides in Carthage. He says his church is "a little church in the big city," a church in the South that grew from a small beginning to a rich, vibrant congregation that has been a part of local life for over 150 years.

"Allison is a town of approximately 2,000 people, and our church is located in the center of town. The congregation was organized on April 8, 1866, under the name of the Allison United Methodist Church. It was organized by Rev. E. B. Smith, who was the first pastor. The church was built in 1876 and has been a vital part of the community ever since."

Dr. Holland, a native of Allison, has been pastor of the church for the past 20 years. He says the church has grown from its original 15 members to over 500 today.

"Our church is a small, but vibrant congregation. We have a wonderful group of members who are active in our church and in the community. We have a strong music ministry, and our Sunday school is well attended."

The church building has undergone several renovations over the years, including the addition of a new fellowship hall in the 1970s.

"Our church is a place where people come to worship and to grow in their faith. We have a strong commitment to reach out to the community and to share the love of God with others."

Dr. Holland says the church is planning a sesquicentennial celebration in 2022 to commemorate its 150 years of service to the community.

"We are looking forward to this celebration and to continuing to serve our community for many more years to come."

Dog snatches cats in 42-0 brawl

By Tom Lawry
Panola County Post

Panola County Post reporter Tom Lawry was covering the high school football game between Carthage and Whitehouse when the infamous cat incident occurred. The game was held at the Panola County Athletic Complex in Panola, Texas, on October 25, 1999.

As the game progressed, tensions between the two teams escalated. In the fourth quarter, with Carthage leading 38-0, a fumble by a Whitehouse player resulted in a turnover. Carthage's defensive line barged onto the field, intent on recovering the loose ball. However, amidst the chaos, a cat suddenly appeared, darting among the players.

The cat, with its tail held high and ears perked up, ran directly towards the center of the field, drawing the attention of both teams. The cat's presence momentarily halted the game as the referee and other officials tried to coax the animal away from the action.

Despite the distraction, Carthage managed to recover the fumble and maintain their lead. However, the incident raised questions about the role of animals in sports settings and the need for better protocols to prevent such occurrences.

Carthage went on to win the game 38-0, but the presence of the cat left a lasting impact on the spectators and the players alike. The incident became a topic of discussion in the local community and sports media.

Despite the unusual event, the game continued without further interruptions, and both teams focused on their performance, ultimately leading to Carthage's victory.

Despite the rather one-sided score, the win was big for the Panola Junior High football team. It was the second win in as many weeks for the Bulldogs.

"We were behind 7-0 at half time, but we came back in the second half to win big," said coach Buddy Foster. "It was a good game for our team."

The Bulldogs scored four touchdowns in the third quarter alone. "We really played well on defense," Foster said. "The defense held up in the second half and we were able to put it away."

Anthony Pope (70) and others played tough defense in Carthage's 34-10 win.
