Texas DPS Trooper Green dies

By Sheppard Gourley

Red Writer

A 40-year-old Texas Department of Safety trooper died Friday night, apparently suffering a massive heart attack in a Captagon restaurant in the state capital. James Patrick "Green" Green, of Greenwood, was rushed by paramedics to the University Medical Center, where he was pronounced dead shortly after 2:00 a.m.

DPS spokesman Robert Payton said Green had worked for the department for 12 years, the last five of which he had served as a captain in charge of the department's Investigative Services Division.

"At the time of death, he was off-duty, but he was working on a case," Payton said. "He was going to the case when he died."

Green was a native of Greenwood, born in 1965. He attended the University of Texas at Austin, where he received a degree in criminal justice. He was a member of the Texas State Troopers Association and a member of the American Legion.

Green's wife and children were not available for comment.

Supreme Court may decide Rollback petition held invalid

By Phil Martin

Red Writer

It may be up to the Texas State Supreme Court to decide whether the petition against city councilwoman Adeline Cooper is valid or not.

On Monday, about 40 minutes after a meeting of the city council, the city councilwoman Adeline Cooper filed a petition with the courts to have the rollback petition held invalid.

The petition was filed by the city councilwoman Adeline Cooper, who represents Ward 3 in the city of Panola.

Cooper said she filed the petition to prevent the rollback petition from being accepted by the city council.

Cooper said she filed the petition because she believes the petition is invalid and should not be accepted by the city council.

The petition was filed on Monday, and the city council will have to address it in its next meeting.

A Feast of Music

The wealth of musical talent and leadership in Panola County will never be documented by the pages of the Watchman, yet the natural resources of the area have been transformed by the presence of a number of fine churches and organizations. The history of Panola County is as rich as its current musical tradition.

The legacy of the lone crazed gunman

In the early morning hours of Tuesday, October 12, a lone gunman entered the Panola County Courthouse in Carthage, Texas, and began shooting at the building and its occupants. The gunman, who has been identified as Richard Lee Thomas, is a former employee of the courthouse and had previously been involved in a legal dispute with the county. The shooting resulted in the death of two courthouse employees and injured two others. The gunman was later found dead at the scene.

Hance standing up to OPEC in Vienna

T. Boone Pickens, the CEO of Continental whom many believe is a key player in the current OPEC crisis, has refused to attend the upcoming Vienna meeting of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Pickens, a member of the OPEC board of governors, has been a vocal critic of the group's production cuts and has threatened to withdraw from the organization if they do not reverse course. The Vienna meeting is scheduled for June 1st and 2nd, and will be the first since the cuts were announced.

New medicare tax in 1989

By Bob More and Shaw Mock

Farms that receive money from the Medicare program will have to pay a tax in 1989, according to a recent congressional committee report. The tax, worth $2.3 billion, will be used to help finance the country's health-care system. Farmers who receive Medicare benefits, including those who have retired, will be affected. The tax will be collected through the Social Security system, and farmers will be required to pay a portion of their Medicare benefits. For more information, contact your local farm extension office. History of Pou family related in book

RILIGHTS are the story of a small town nestled in the hills of the Central Texas Hill Country. The town's name is Pou, and it has a rich history that dates back to the early 1900s. The town was founded by a group of settlers who came from Tennessee and Kentucky in search of a new life. The Pou family was one of the early settlers in the town, and their story is told in a book that was recently published.

The Pou family is a prominent family in the town, and their legacy can still be seen today. The family has been involved in many aspects of the town's life, including agriculture, education, and politics. The book tells the story of the family's journey from its founding to the present day.

The Pou family's role in the history of the town is highlighted in the book, which is available at the local library. The book is written by local author, Ida Mae Heard, who has spent many years researching the family's history. The book is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of the town.
