The Macumba Chicken: a fable for goodbyes

The old chicken in the yard was getting a little tired. She knew it was time to leave. She had been there for a long time, laying eggs and watching over her chicks. But now, it was time for her to move on. The farmer decided it was time to sell her.

"I'm sorry," the farmer said to the old chicken, "but it's time for you to go. You've served your purpose." The chicken nodded her head, knowing it was true. She had given her all to the farm, and now it was time for her to rest.

As the farmer carried her to the market, she looked back at her home and cried. She had lived a good life, but now it was time for her to move on. She wondered what her fate would be at the market.

When the chicken reached the market, she was surprised by what she saw. People were bustling about, selling their goods. But she didn't feel afraid. She had faced many challenges in her life, and she knew she could handle this one.

As she was placed in the bin, she closed her eyes and waited. The sound of the crowd around her was loud, but she didn't care. She had come too far to be afraid of a little noise.

"What's that chicken doing here?" asked one of the farmers. "It's the old lady we sold last week. What a surprise!"

"She's not going anywhere," said the farmer. "She's just taking a little rest before she can go on her way."

The chicken opened her eyes and looked around. She saw the other animals in their cages, and she knew she wasn't alone. She had friends in the market, and she would find them.

As she was taken to the meat market in the city, she thought about her life. She had been a good chicken, and she would be missed. But she knew it was time for her to move on. She closed her eyes and waited for her fate to be decided.

"We'll let her go," said the farmer, "if she's not sold in the next five minutes."

The chicken opened her eyes and looked around. She saw the other animals in their cages, and she knew she wasn't alone. She had friends in the market, and she would find them.

As she was taken to the meat market in the city, she thought about her life. She had been a good chicken, and she would be missed. But she knew it was time for her to move on. She closed her eyes and waited for her fate to be decided.

The chicken was sold for a good price. She walked through the city, looking for her friends. She found them, and they helped her find her way back to the farm.

When she reached the farm, she was welcomed by her family. They were happy to see her. She had been gone for a long time, but she had been through many adventures.

The chicken looked at her family and smiled. She had been a good chicken, and she had done her duty. She was ready for the next chapter of her life. She closed her eyes and waited for her fate to be decided.

The chicken died peacefully, knowing she had done her part. She had lived a good life, and she was ready to move on to the next chapter. She was a good chicken, and she would be missed. But she knew it was time for her to move on. She closed her eyes and waited for her fate to be decided.

Strength For Living
BY JERRY BUDMAN

In the air, a voice said, "You were made in the Imagination of God." It was the voice of the Holy Spirit, the voice of the Creator, the voice of the Maker of all things. It was a voice that spoke to the heart, to the soul, to the very essence of being. It was a voice that said, "You were made in the Imagination of God." And with those words, the voice faded away, leaving only the sound of silence in its wake.

Ephesians 2:10 "For we are henceforth Children of God through Faith in Christ Jesus." Our Faith in Christ Jesus is the basis of our covenent with Abraham. It is through our Faith that we are able to see the Imagination of God in our own lives. It is through our Faith that we are able to see the Imagination of God in the lives of others. It is through our Faith that we are able to see the Imagination of God in the world around us.
