DPS troopers face lawsuit here

By TED LEACH

Police critics at the Law Officer Defense Association of Texas, a group that offers to defend DPS officers who run into legal difficulties, reported that Thursday the DPS had been served with a lawsuit filed by a Harris County attorney. The suit was filed on behalf of a prisoner who was stopped and searched by DPS officers and then arrested for a warrant.

The suit is the latest in a series of lawsuits filed against DPS officers in recent years. The suit alleges that DPS officers violated the constitutional rights of the prisoner and that the prisoner was wrongfully arrested.

The DPS has not yet responded to the suit. However, the agency has a policy of not commenting on pending litigation.

The incident occurred in 2018 when the prisoner was stopped by DPS officers for speeding. After conducting a traffic stop, the officers found the prisoner in possession of a warrant for theft.

The prisoner was arrested and charged with theft. The case went to trial and the prisoner was convicted and sentenced to a year in prison.

The prisoner filed a lawsuit against the DPS, alleging that the officers violated his constitutional rights, and that the arrest was unlawful.

The DPS countered that the officers had probable cause to arrest the prisoner and that the warrant was valid.

The lawsuit is now pending in court. The DPS has not yet filed a response to the suit.
