Like children at play

The City Council in action can be compared to a group of children on a playground. After a few minutes together, there are no secrets. Everyone seems to be in some trouble, and no one seems to care. Council members don't respect one another, or each other's positions.

To the sun, council members agree on everything. However, one can see from daily newspapers that this is not the case. The press will include a column from one council member or another that seems to be written by a professional reporter. The council members are not a happy group.

Ireland had taken all of about 45 seconds to get his first points in the game, and the Cardinals (73-15, 24-5) never looked back.

The Fillies (51-17, 18-11) were dealt an early blow to their scoring when Lauren Washington, a rookie, got a technical foul shortly before halftime. Washington scored 29 points in the Fillies’ only tournament game against the Cardinals last season, but the Fillies had no such success Monday.

The Fillies were led by Priscilla Smith with 25 points, but she was held to 1-for-9 shooting from the field. She was later removed from the game.

Definitely it's St. William, but who's St. William?

Church casts ballots to pick patron saint

By Betty Lou Bledsoe

January 15, 1989

If you don't know any more than the don't feel bad. Few in a few years ago when you heard the name of St. William the silent Church in Parkhill, Texas, you had to be a member of the local history society to know that St. William the Silent was its patron saint.

There's nothing rare about it. A lot of churches don't pick a specific saint, but if you want to pick one you can.

"You can," said the Rev.
D. (“Dan”) Lackey, pastor of Sanctuary Baptist Church in Parkhill.

St. William, Lackey said, was the third British martyr executed for his faith by King Henry VIII. The English reformation led to the breakup of the Church of England from the Catholic Church. St. William was beheaded in 1535, associated with many "martyrs of the silent tongue," people who preferred not to speak out for their faith.

Lackey's church is seeking new leadership for St. William the Silent. The church is making the final decision next weekend on which saint will be patron of the church.

Lackey said the choice of St. William was the result of reflections on the life of the British archbishop used to influence the English reformation. The church decided had been made (by the archbishop) for the church.

"We could have chosen from the list the names of 10 saints, and we thought that was a good way to pick a saint.
St. William was chosen for his silent nature," Lackey said.
