Rains in deep trouble with Hispanics

By Donald Williams

As heavy rains have continued to fall across South Texas, many communities have struggled with flooding and power outages. In some areas, residents have been forced to evacuate their homes and seek shelter in neighboring towns. The situation has been particularly tough for Hispanics, who are often affected more severely by natural disasters due to a lack of resources and access to emergency services.

The area around the South Texas border has been hit particularly hard, with several towns reporting extensive damage to homes and infrastructure. In Laredo, for example, the downtown area has been flooded, and many businesses have had to close temporarily. The situation has caused some residents to question the effectiveness of the government's response to the crisis.

In addition to the physical damage, the rain has also had a significant impact on the local economy. Many farmers and ranchers have lost crops and livestock due to the flooding, and the lack of electricity has disrupted supply chains for food and other essential goods.

The community is rallying together to provide support to those affected by the storms. Local organizations and volunteers are helping to distribute food and water, and some schools have opened their doors to provide temporary shelter. Despite the challenges, there is a sense of resilience and determination among the residents to rebuild and recover.

One of the few remaining chamber of commerce offices in the city is the network of harbor offices. They have been serving the community for over a century, with the goal of providing a safe haven for sailors and mariners. The office is located on the waterfront, and it offers a variety of services to the public.

Today, a group of volunteers is working to clean up the area around the harbor. They are picking up litter and removing any debris that has collected over the years. The volunteers are made up of local residents, as well as some visitors from out of town.

Case worker's notebook

Girl's violence was learned behavior

By Bob Taylor

A case worker in the region has been studying a girl's behavior and has come to the conclusion that it is a learned behavior. The girl has been acting out and disrupting her family, and the case worker believes that her behavior is based on what she has learned in the past.

The case worker has been working with the girl and her family to develop a plan to help her change her behavior. The plan includes regular therapy sessions and family counseling.

T-Wheeler...Are they worth $155,000?

By Charles Moore

The T-Wheeler, a popular model of bicycle, has become quite expensive in recent years. Some collectors are willing to pay up to $155,000 for a rare model. The T-Wheeler was first introduced in the 1930s and has remained popular ever since.

The demand for T-Wheelers has increased in recent years, particularly among collectors. The price of a T-Wheeler can vary depending on the condition and rarity of the bike. Some collectors are willing to pay a premium for a bike in good condition, while others are more focused on the model and design.

Senior citizens, students sought for volunteer jobs

By Margaret Lee

The local senior center and the high school are looking for volunteers to help with various tasks around the center. Volunteers are needed to help with everything from organizing events to assisting with daily operations.

The center is particularly in need of volunteers who can dedicate a few hours each week to help with the center's activities. Volunteers are also needed at the high school, where they can help with everything from tutoring to assisting with extracurricular activities.

Unorthodox thinking is PC public service norm

By Dorothy Specter

Not long ago, the Supermarket chain announced plans to institute a new policy of allowing children to play in the store. Many parents welcomed the change, seeing it as a way to keep their children out of trouble. However, some parents were concerned about the potential impact on the store's reputation.

"I'm just worried about what will happen if my child behaves badly," said one parent. "I don't want to be held responsible for my child's actions." Another parent added, "I think it's a good idea, but we need to make sure our children are well-behaved."

Despite these concerns, the Supermarket chain continued with its policy, and the store has seen a decrease in incidents of child misbehavior. Parents have reported that their children are more well-behaved in the store than ever before.

"It's been great," said one parent. "My child is more respectful and well-behaved than ever." Another parent agreed, "It's been a positive change for us and the store." The Supermarket chain has also reported an increase in sales, likely due to the new policy.

Speaker to explore 'why' of drug abuse epidemic

Public health officials are urging the public to explore the root causes of drug abuse. The issue remains a topic of debate, with experts pointing to a variety of factors, including social and economic conditions, family dynamics, and mental health issues.

"We need to understand the 'why' behind drug abuse," said one expert. "It's not just about individual choice. There are underlying factors that contribute to this problem." The experts urge the public to explore these underlying factors and work towards solutions.

Panola County Roots

BY ROBBIE JEFFREY

In an effort to raise awareness of the history of the Panola County, a new initiative is being launched. The initiative will focus on preserving and sharing the stories of local history.

"We want to make sure that our history is not forgotten," said one organizer. "By sharing these stories, we can honor those who came before us and inspire future generations." The initiative will include a series of events, such as historical tours and lectures, as well as a new website dedicated to local history.

Panola’s playoff hopes crippled

By TED LEACH

KILIONE — Only 22 seconds into the first quarter, the Panola College Generals were down 11-0, and a 22-13 deficit at the half. The Generals had a better chance to score in the first half than the second half of the 77-65 loss to the Region VIII Columniers in the Region VIII Regional Finals.

No one expected the Generals to win the game by as much as 22 points, let alone 11. The Generals had been a high-scoring team, averaging 96.4 points per game, but on Tuesday afternoon, they scored only 47 points, Their shooting was off, as was their defense.

The Columniers, on the other hand, scored 77 points, their highest of the season. They shot 55 percent from the field, including 7 of 18 from three-point range. The Generals shot only 36 percent from the field, including 10 of 28 from three-point range.
