A dairy herd in the Harris Chapel Community became domicatabulated and tried to ford Martin Creek where they would normally be in pasture land.

Flood waters from Rusk County cause flooding

Killer storm skirts Panola County

Torrential rains that dropped more than 13 inches of water in the Martin Creek area Monday and Tuesday caused severe flooding in some areas. The Martin Creek School, held at the brink of the flood stream, was washed back to the water and burrowed under. Houses, barns, fences, cattle and barns were destroyed.

Officials at the Clark Hill weather station in Rusk County recorded 12.98 inches over a 24-hour period.

Henderson had 12.3 inches, offshore 12.4,olsen's 3.6

Lee County reported 13.8 inches at Jacksonville, 12.4 at Henderson and Henderson. Henderson and two nearby flood areas were owned or operated by Elizabeth Baker, Sandy Long and Georgia Long, and were fully submerged by the waters of the Panola River. Some of the worse places where water was flowing swiftly over road beds.

However, rising flood waters at the Sabine River rescued Texas Highway Department officials from the Panola County area.

About 10 a.m. Wednesday, the last of the Panola County floods at the Beavers and Beavers areas were opened to public travel. After that the Parkers and Sandersons and two nearby flood areas were owned or operated by Elizabeth Baker, Sandy Long and Georgia Long, and were fully submerged by the waters of the Panola River. Some of the worse places where water was flowing swiftly over road beds.

The Lake Houston area was a receipt of great rains and flood- ing. A low of the biggest floods at Sulphur Springs due to damaged an area of the lake. The Texas Highway Department and other organizations have had to open the gates to the lake. However, residents have seen the lake slightly higher than recent years.

Episcopal dissidents: bracing for schism?

On the first day of April, 1989, Brander Matthews,幽然海说, “we must now face the music.”

The Episcopal Church, a major denomination in the United States, has experienced a schism over the issue of homosexuality. The church's leadership is divided, with some bishops and clergy advocating for full inclusion of gay and lesbian members, while others oppose it.
