'Gender abortion': naive or shrewd?

A Texas Senate committee right now is looking at a bill prohibiting abortion if the pregnant woman simply doesn't like the size of her fetus. The problem is that women are not always aware of their pregnancy in time to take the abortion pill. If this bill becomes law, women who might otherwise have chosen abortion will be forced to continue pregnancies they do not want.

Of course, the issue of abortion is complex, and there are many views on what policies should be in place. It is important for leaders to consider the perspectives of those affected by these decisions, including women who may be struggling with the decision to proceed with a pregnancy they do not want.

Bush found economy cause for rejoicing

PERTH, March 15 (UPI) -- President Bush found plenty to be thankful for in a speech to a business audience here today, despite the economic downturn that has hit much of the world. The president said the United States was well positioned to weather the storm.

"We are confident the American economy will come through this difficult period," Bush said. "We have a strong foundation, a healthy balance sheet, and a record of long-term growth."

The president's comments came as the United States faces a recession that is currently affecting many other countries around the world. Despite the challenges, Bush said he was optimistic about the future of the economy.

"I believe we will come through this recession and emerge stronger on the other side," the president said.
