Texas Railroad Commissioner speaks at Rotary
Sharp says wave of future

By DONNY ROYDLE

Texas is back in the saddle again, but with natural gas, not oil. Where we used to drill for oil of all kinds, we will now be drilling for gas and finding it in Texas.

Chairman of natural gas in Texas

Texas Railroad Commissioner John Sharp did the Trenches today. He said the state has a wave of natural gas.

"Texas is back in the saddle again, but with natural gas, not oil. Where we used to drill for oil of all kinds, we will now be drilling for gas and finding it in Texas."

Al ready, the state's $4 billion natural gas industry is on the way to being taken out of the state's economy.

Memorial Day

Memorial Day, also known as Decoration Day, was celebrated on May 30, 1868, when General John A. Logan, Commanding General of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued an order to decorate the graves of soldiers who died in the Civil War.

"The event was originally designated as the 24th anniversary of the Civil War and is now dedicated to the memory of all national war dead.

The number of United States soldiers who died in the American Civil War was 620,757. The number of soldiers who died in the Civil War, according to the United States Census Bureau, was 62,075.

"We have been here for the memorial for those who perished in the Civil War. We have been here for the memorial, and we have been here for the memorial."

"It's really a cool day more than a good day," said an official. "We've been blessed with nice weather for those who come and die for the veterans who are still alive."

"There are a lot of volunteers who have come to this place that offense and honor lies here today.

"We remember those who fell and those who fell in battle. We remember them for their service and for their sacrifice.

"We are here for the memorial for those who passed away in the Civil War. We are here for the memorial, and we have been here for the memorial."

L'Atelier Jim Wright is winding down, but don't go away. There's more to come.

Congressmen Bill Alexander, Democrat from Arkansas, and Republican Trent Gingles, who lost the first round to Jim Wright in the New York Times, Alexander has challenged Gingles with "two-Michiganders," and will be seeking a second term in the House of Representatives. Jim Wright comes from Arkansas, as does his opponent, Trent Gingles. The two candidates are both Democrats, and both have strong ties to the state of Arkansas. Gingles is a native of Arkansas, while Alexander has lived in Texas for many years. The race is expected to be a close one, with both candidates working hard to win the support of voters in the district.

The race for the seat in Arkansas has been described as "a battle of strong wills," with both candidates clearly determined to win. Alexander has been a strong supporter of immigration reform and has worked hard to champion the rights of undocumented workers. Gingles, on the other hand, has been a vocal critic of his colleagues in Congress and has called for greater accountability in the government.

The campaign has been marked by intense debate over a number of issues, including immigration, healthcare, and education. Both candidates have emphasized the need for change, with Alexander calling for a new approach to solving the country's problems and Gingles promising to work tirelessly to ensure that the wrongs of the past are not repeated.

The race in Arkansas is one of many that will be decided in the upcoming election, and both candidates are expected to campaign hard in the coming weeks to ensure their victory. The outcome of the election could have significant implications for the future of American politics, with both candidates vying for the support of a diverse group of voters.

Take the extra time to practice safety

As we near the end of the semester, it's important to review and reinforce our safety practices. This is especially true with the increase in students and activities on campus. We want to ensure that everyone is aware of the new rules and regulations, and that they are followed.

One of the most important things to keep in mind is the rule of three. This means that if you see a potential safety hazard, you should report it to an authority figure immediately. This could be a professor, a staff member, or even a member of the student government. By doing so, you are helping to keep everyone safe and reducing the risk of accidents.

Another important rule to remember is the rule of four. This means that if you are in a group, you should always have at least four people. This is important because if anyone gets hurt or needs help, there will be someone nearby to assist them.

In addition to these rules, we also encourage everyone to be aware of their surroundings and to take the extra time to practice safety. This means being aware of your belongings, being aware of your environment, and being aware of your own personal safety.

By following these rules and regulations, we can ensure that everyone has a safe and successful semester. We appreciate your cooperation and encourage you to report any potential safety hazards immediately.

Sharp on natural gas

Last October, during the presidential campaign, Texas Republican Senator John Cornyn said that Panola County was burning fossil fuels at the Pequot Dam. On a return visit last week, the Democrat from Victoria said, "We don't have a very good record of doing anything wrong." A company called "Pequot Dam," which is owned by the town of Pequot Dam, had attempted to open a gas pipeline near Panola County. The company claimed that the pipeline would provide much-needed natural gas to the region, but the people of Panola County were not convinced. They were concerned about the potential environmental impact of the pipeline and the risks associated with burning fossil fuels.

The people of Panola County are concerned about the potential impact of the pipeline on their community. They want to be sure that their concerns are taken into account before any decisions are made. They want to be sure that their voices are heard and that their concerns are taken seriously. They want to be sure that they are not left behind as the rest of the country moves towards a cleaner, more sustainable future.

The people of Panola County are not alone in their concern. Across the country, people are demanding a cleaner, more sustainable future. They want to be sure that their voices are heard and that their concerns are taken seriously. They want to be sure that they are not left behind as the rest of the country moves towards a cleaner, more sustainable future.

Where did the man on the oatmeal box go?

Mr. Oatmeal, the man who found himself on the oatmeal box, is now back in his kitchen. Mr. Oatmeal is known for his love of oatmeal, and he has always been a popular figure in the kitchen. However, he has been missing for a while, and many people were concerned for his safety.

Mr. Oatmeal was last seen taking a morning walk in the neighborhood. He disappeared while on his walk, and no one has seen him since. There have been many theories about what happened to Mr. Oatmeal, but no one knows for sure.

Some people believe that Mr. Oatmeal was taken by a group of oatmeal enthusiasts who wanted to use him for a new oatmeal recipe. Others believe that he was kidnapped by a rival oatmeal company that wanted to use him for their own purposes. Still others believe that he was simply lost and had wandered off on his own.

Whatever happened to Mr. Oatmeal, we hope that he is safe and well. We hope that he finds his way back to his kitchen and continues to enjoy his oatmeal.

CJHS students learn hunting rules

CJHS students learned hunting rules last week. The course was presented by local Game Warden Randy Hunter. The course covered the basics of hunting, including hunting safety, hunting ethics, and the rules and regulations of hunting.

The students were taught about the importance of hunting safety and were shown how to use the proper equipment. They were also taught about the rules and regulations of hunting, including the use of firearms and the legal requirements for hunting. The course was designed to help students develop the skills and knowledge they need to be safe and successful hunters.

The course was well-received by the students, who said that they had learned a lot and were excited to put their newly acquired skills to use. They said that they were looking forward to going hunting and were eager to share their knowledge with others.

The course was presented by local Game Warden Randy Hunter. He is a experienced hunter and is passionate about teaching others about the responsibilities of hunting. He is dedicated to ensuring that hunters are safe and successful, and he is committed to teaching others about the importance of hunting safety and the rules and regulations of hunting.

PC schedules computer camps

Penola College will sponsor two computer camps this summer. The summer computer camps are open to all middle and high school students.

First Things First
BY TULA BIGGS

What do you do if you have a computer and you want to use it for fun? There are many fun things you can do with a computer. You can play games, write stories, or do research. If you are interested in the computer, you can learn a lot from books and magazines.

The computer is a useful tool for education. It is a way to learn and to have fun. It is a tool that can be used in many ways. It is a way to communicate with others. It is a way to do research and to do homework.

We have been open since February 1.

School teachers receive break

The Texas State Teachers Association "Pro Video" program is a new service that provides teachers with free video editing and production services. Teachers can use these services to create educational videos or other projects related to their teaching. The program is available to all teachers in Texas and is funded by the Texas State Teachers Association. Teachers interested in using the "Pro Video" program should contact their local TSTA office for more information.

Police report

A burglar entered a home in the early morning hours and stole a necklace valued at $500. The burglar broke into the home through the front window and took the necklace, which was stored in a jewelry box in the living room. The homeowner discovered the theft when they arrived home and called the police. At this time, no suspects have been identified.

Etiquette for young ladies makes comeback

"White Gloves, Lace, and Party Manners" to be taught

By Dorothy Finley
Quill Editor

For the past 25 years, Janie B. Ross, _The Quill_ editor, has given up performing on stage and devoted her efforts to teaching etiquette to young ladies.

"The demand for etiquette classes has never been greater," said Janie B. Ross. "I've had more inquiries this year than ever before." She attributed the interest to the growing awareness of the importance of good manners in today's society.

"Everyone seems to understand the value of good manners," she continued. "It's not just about looking good, but about feeling good as well. It's about being respectful and considerate of others."

Janie B. Ross teaches etiquette classes to young ladies of all ages. "I start with the basics," she said. "From table manners to the way they should carry themselves in public places. It's all about instilling confidence and self-esteem." She believes that good manners are essential in today's world, especially with the increasing number of social media platforms.

Janie B. Ross's classes are held once a week and are limited to 10 participants. "We cover topics such as table manners, dress etiquette, and social graces," she said. "We also discuss how to make a good first impression and how to handle difficult situations."

"I've had many success stories," she said. "I've seen these girls grow in confidence and become more confident in their interactions with others."

Janie B. Ross's classes are open to all young ladies, and she encourages them to sign up as soon as possible. "Spaces are limited," she said. "I want to make sure that everyone has the opportunity to learn these important skills."

For more information, please contact Janie B. Ross at _The Quill_ office.
