For drug dealing
Onetime jailer gets five years

By DOROTHY KEVILLS
Staff Writer

Sanny Church, 3, a curly-haired, sandy-haired girl who was born in 1978 and lived at the time of this writing in a residential center for women, is currently serving a sentence of two years for drug dealing.

On Wednesday in Carthage, in Judge Remi Bona's 10th District Court, District Attorney Lewis Chastain, the oldest of the deceased, sentenced the man to two years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Church had been convicted of possessing and selling marijuana, and was sentenced to two years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

On the last day of the trial, Judge Chastain recited the sentence of two years for drug dealing, and the man was transported to the Texas Department of Corrections.
