City to hold line on taxes
Policy will create headaches for Thomas

City Manager Charles Thomas is looking forward to the day when the city can hold the line on property tax payments for people, as he said, "The day when the city can hold the line on property tax payments for people." Thomas explained that the current policy of raising the property tax by 5% each year is causing headaches for many residents, who are struggling to keep up with the increasing costs of living. "We need to do something to ease the burden on our residents," he said. "We are looking at ways to reduce the property tax rate and provide more benefits to our community." Thomas also mentioned that the city is looking at options such as a property tax credit and a potential increase in the city's sales tax to help reduce the burden on residents. "We are committed to finding ways to make our city more affordable for everyone," he said. "We will continue to explore all options to ensure that our residents are not facing undue financial stress."

Strengthen For Living

By Dr. William H. Bonner

In these days of stress and change, it's easy to feel overwhelmed. The pressures of daily life can weigh heavily on our shoulders, and it's important to find ways to strengthen ourselves spiritually. One way to do this is by focusing on our relationship with God. Taking time to pray and meditate can help us connect with the divine and find peace in our hearts.

One recent story that caught my attention was about a man who had been going through a tough time. He had lost his job and was feeling uncertain about his future. One day, he decided to go to church and found comfort in the words of the congregation. The man began to think about his own faith and how it could help him through this difficult time.

I believe that faith is a powerful force in our lives. It can provide us with strength and courage to face the challenges we encounter. So, whether you're going through a tough time or just looking for a way to strengthen your faith, I encourage you to try some of the strategies mentioned above.

Instant blindness.

Glare can play tricks with your vision. Poor glare acuity may suddenly put you at risk in a potentially dangerous situation and jeopardize your safety and the safety of those around you.

Maybe you've been driving at night and glare from oncoming headlights blinded you.

Or maybe it's difficult to see while around water.

Perhaps driving on a rainy day is a problem.

Vision is affected when light enters the eye, diffusing or scattering. When glare is too bright, this diffusion of light causes images to be partially or totally displaced. Even when glare is not as bright as light, long as glare conditions are mild, you may have a good visual acuity. However, glare conditions cannot be adequately controlled, and it is not uncommon for glare-sensitive patients to otherwise enjoy good vision.

Poor glare acuity can be attributed to many causes. If you are concerned about seeing well in bright or glare conditions, see your eye doctor for diagnosis, recommendations, and treatment.
