Governor Clements, major candidates vow no new taxes

Texas lieutenant governor is promising to fight for tax cuts. She wants to eliminate the property tax, and she believes a constitutional amendment to limit property tax growth is necessary. She says the state needs to slow down its spending and look for ways to cut costs. Other candidates are also promising to work to reduce taxes, but they differ on how they would do it. Some believe in lowering rates, while others want to broaden the tax base. There are concerns that any cuts could hurt revenue and services, so it will be a challenge to find a solution that works for everyone.

Bentsen IRA to benefit first-time homebuyers

Texas Senator Bentsen is proposing an IRA for first-time homebuyers. It would allow people to save for a down payment and other home-related expenses without paying taxes on the interest earnings. The program would be modeled after similar programs in other states and would be available to anyone who has lived in Texas for at least two years. Bentsen believes the program will help more people become homeowners and reduce the pressure on the housing market. However, there are debates about how effective it would be and whether it would be a good use of state funds.

In this week's issue of The Panola Watchman, we take a look at the U.S. presidential campaign of 1988, focusing on the candidates and the issues of the day. We also look back at the history of the newspaper, which was founded in 1888.

The newspaper was founded in 1888, and it has been published continuously since then. In 1933, the newspaper was purchased by the Panola County News and later by the Panola County Times. In 1988, the newspaper merged with the Panola County Times to form the Panola Watchman.

In this week's issue, we take a look at the campaign events of the 1988 election and the challenges that the candidates faced. We also look at the issues that were at the forefront of the campaign, such as economic policies and foreign affairs.
