Arkla Gas tanks explode in flames

Firemen kept busy controlling fires

The Arkansas Oil Institute Fire Department has been busy with the go-by-nearby fire calls since Thursday, Fire Chief Eddie Atkins said Tuesday.

He said the high fire Index has contributed to the need for fire departments to be out by the citizens in the city, borough and in the city for the present.

Arkla Gas will have a temporary usage problem for some time, he said.

"The tanks are full of gas and there is a possible problem within the city limits. However, we are working on the situation," he said.

The high fire Index has been caused by the hot weather conditions and the high fire Index has been around 40.

Ratatlf speak on workers' comp

The Pacific Oil Institute of Chemists has announced that it will conduct a survey of the work force in the chemical industry to determine the prevalence of problems associated with work-related injuries.

"The survey will be conducted to better understand the extent and nature of work-related injuries in the chemical industry," said Tom Smith, president of the Institute.

The survey is expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Counseling to begin January 3 at college

Counseling for students who plan to attend Pacific College during the fall semester will begin on January 3, according to University President John Smith.

"The counseling will be available to all students," Smith said. "It will be conducted in a confidential manner to ensure students can speak freely about their concerns and get the help they need."
