"At first I didn't want to talk about our funerals. But, now I'm glad we did."

Chaplain is looking at ways to help those who are grieving
The Rev. John Williams, chaplain at Fort Sam Houston, is looking for ways to help those who are grieving. He is considering offering grief counseling and support groups.

We chose Forethought... funerals planning...is one of those things that's as easy to put off, put on hold, you know. It's one of those things that's important for people to take care of. But, once you start thinking about it, you start asking questions about how I want my funeral to be. I realized I'm important for people to be able to honor me the way I want to be honored. I wanted a simple eulogy, and a simple funeral. I didn't want a lot of music or organ music. We had a few insights.

Forethought is funeral planning... before the need arises
I always thought of funeral planning as a vulnerable and sad thing. But, actually, it's brought to me as a way to honor you. Because when someone passes on, you're able to plan the service, you're able to honor the loved one in a special way.

GLAUCOMA

The "Silent Thief"
The Facts About Glaucoma may rob you of your sight permanently. The Facts About Glaucoma: 1,070,000 Americans have diagnosed visual impairment from Glaucoma. At least that many more have the disease but do not yet know it. Glaucoma is often called the "silent thief" because typically there are no symptoms until permanent vision loss has occurred. Glaucoma alone can cause total blindness. But people can still have partial vision, and can still drive, and still do all kinds of things. But then one day, the vision is gone. Glaucoma is the most common cause of blindness in the world.

Right Now

- 800,000 Americans are considered legally blind.
- 3.5 million people have impaired vision due to cataracts.
- 14 million people have vision problems most correctable by glasses.
