Selling short makes you a market bear

By BYRON WESKIN

Our market is in a bear market, and we need to be careful about the companies we invest in. When a company is in a bear market, it's important to look for those that are well-managed and have strong fundamentals. It's also important to avoid companies that are overvalued and have high debt levels.

Local store affiliated with NAPA

Toledo Automotive Supply first opened its doors in 1975 on the Garfield Square. "We were about one-third the size we are now," says Carl Hoffmeister, owner of the auto parts store. "There was only two of us working here at the time. Things certainly have changed." As the business grew, Toledo Automotive moved to its location at 206 E. Garfield Square, a short walk from the original location. The parts house now has 11 employees working for it and has expanded its services to include a variety of new servies. "Customer service is top priority," Hoffmeister says. "We try to treat the customer like he thinks he ought to be treated. We want to give him the best price and the best product. That's what he expects and that's what he gets here." Toledo is affiliated with NAPA, the largest automotive conglomerate in the world. Hoffmeister says the store handles several large accounts. "We are not good with big industrial accounts. The city, the county — the schools. We have some programs that nobody else can compete with very well." In addition to parts, Toledo also has an automotive machine shop and a metal shop. "We have a machine shop for about five or six years," Lloyd Starly, who formerly was an instructor at Bowling Green State University, who does an "amazing job. We put in a metal shop that runs quite well as well." Toledo also buys aluminum cans and ship across as a shipping station for United Parcel Service. For more information, call the handy U.S. at Toledo Automotive Supply at 632-7600.

Take care of your investment
Keep your car up to par with springtime care

Remember that the spring is the right time to give your car a thorough checkup before you start using it on the road. It’s important to make sure that your car is in good shape to avoid any potential breakdowns or accidents. Here are some tips to help you keep your car in top condition:

1. Check the oil: Make sure your car has the right type and level of oil. This will help your engine run smoothly and avoid any potential problems.
2. Check the tire pressure: Regularly check the tire pressure to ensure that your tires are not under or over-inflated. This will help improve fuel efficiency and extend the life of your tires.
3. Inspect the brakes: Check the brakes for any signs of wear or damage. This is especially important if you recently brakes have been used.
4. Check the battery: Make sure your battery is in good condition. A weak battery can cause your engine to stall or not start.
5. Inspect the cooling system: Check the coolant level and condition. A clogged radiator can cause your engine to overheat, which can damage your engine.
6. Check the air filter: A dirty air filter can reduce engine performance and fuel efficiency. Regularly clean or replace your air filter to ensure optimal performance.
7. Test the emissions: Have your emissions system checked by a professional technician to ensure that your car is meeting emissions standards.
8. Inspect the body and paint: Check for any dents, scratches, or damage to the body of your car. This will help prevent further damage and keep your car looking its best.

By following these tips, you can help ensure that your car is ready for the road and avoid any potential problems. Remember to schedule regular maintenance checks to keep your car in top condition.

Boykin of Auto Body pays attention to detail and professionalism

It’s very important that windshields are repaired properly. If you try to put it in with a kit, you could be injured should you get it in a wreck. That windshield is designed to hold the frame of the car in place. If it is not held together properly, it could cause serious injury. Boykin says that it is especially important for the public to be informed about the dangers of using windshields.

Boykin also points out that windshields can be very expensive. A new windshield can cost hundreds of dollars, and if it is not installed properly, it could cause serious injury. Boykin recommends that you use a professional to install your windshield to ensure that it is properly installed.
