North Texas rains haunt Panola County

Floods, tornadoes rip county

Several storms and possibly several tornadoes were reported through Panola County Sunday afternoon and evening. Some of the damage to homes and properties was categorized as a tornado or a heavy rainstorm. The official tallies were not in, but the impact was significant in several areas.

The Sabine River continued to rise Sunday as it moved through Panola County, growing in volume with the rains that fell in the area. The river is expected to crest within the next 24 hours, according to authorities.

A spokesman for the Panola County Flood Control District said that the Monday morning crest of the river was 4 feet higher than the previous year. The floodgates were opened on Monday morning to release some of the water.

Chamber to honor Pennzoil

Industrial Appreciation Week has been named for this week, May 16-22, in the Panola County. The activities will include a gala dinner, a parade, and a musical performance.

The Panola County Development Foundation has chosen Pennzoil as this year's featured company. The parade will feature floats from Pennzoil's corporate headquarters in Houston.

Taxes determine education funds

In 1988, the Panola County school district was awarded $1.5 million in state education funds. The funds were used to build the new Panola County High School, which opened in 1990. The school has since grown to accommodate the increase in student population.

The increase in student population has put a strain on the school district's budget. The school district is currently seeking additional funding to maintain and improve the facilities.

State income tax, anyone?

It is a sine qua non that persons seeking to pass through the state on any form of transportation will be required to pay a toll. That is the reason why the state income tax is a sine qua non to the state treasury. If the state income tax is not collected, then the state cannot function. If the state cannot function, then the state cannot provide the services that its citizens expect.

The state income tax is a sine qua non because it is the only revenue source available to the state. The state cannot function without revenue, and the only revenue source available to the state is the state income tax.

Carthage Oil and Gas

The Southeast Petroleum Test

The Southeast Petroleum Test is a critical component of the Carthage Oil and Gas industry. This test is conducted to evaluate the potential of oil and gas reserves in the area. The test involves the injection of a fluid into the ground to stimulate the production of oil and gas. The results of this test are then used to determine the feasibility of further exploration and development of the area. The test is conducted under the supervision of Panola Watchman, ensuring the safety and efficiency of the process.
