Rumors dispelled by investigators

Officers' deaths accidental

Texas Parks and Wildlife law enforcement officers are convinced that a fly fishing accident caused the deaths of two officers. The incident occurred on June 2, 1964, in the Panola Mountains near Big Sandy, Texas, as the two officers were fishing on a river. The officers were identified as Deputy Sheriff Billie and Deputy Deputy Sheriff Bud. Both officers were killed when their fishing line became entangled in a tree, causing them to fall into the river. The tree was located near the bank of the river, and it is believed that the officers lost their footing while trying to pull the line out. The officers were found by a passing motorist, and both officers were pronounced dead at the scene.

Texas Parks and Wildlife law enforcement officers are also investigating the possibility of foul play in the deaths of the two officers. The officers were known to be members of a close-knit group of law enforcement officers, and it is believed that they were killed in the line of duty.

Decker, Hill truly men for all seasons

Some weeks, Bob Decker and Tom Hill are a couple of the nicest people you'd want to meet. They've been just as kind and considerate to strangers as they are to their friends. They're both popular at the church and in the community, and they always have a smile on their face.

Their kindness and enthusiasm make them ideal leaders for the church. They're both active in the community and work hard to help others. When they're not busy with church activities, they're volunteering for various community events.

Their leadership style is based on their own experiences. They believe in doing the right thing, even if it's not always easy. They've both faced challenges in their lives, but they've always come through with a positive attitude and a willingness to help others.

Their commitment to the church and the community is evident in their actions. They work hard to make sure that everyone feels welcome and included. They're both great at building relationships and making people feel valued.
