War on drugs being waged at home

Lawmen stay busy with drug busts

Wednesday night saw early capture of a drug bust in the city. Several officers were involved in the operation, which resulted in the arrest of two men. One of the officers, Officer John Williams, said that the bust was the result of a tip received from a confidential informant. The bust was made at around 9 p.m., and the officers recovered a large amount of marijuana, which they said was being sold in the city. They also recovered a small amount of money, which they said was used to purchase the drugs.

Consolidation could hurt local schools

Superintendents agree that other solutions are better

For another time, the Texas legislature will try to find a solution to the state's school finance problem. But this time, the House and Senate are working together to find a solution. The House has already passed its own version of the bill, but the Senate has not. The Senate is expected to take up the bill next week.

Vocational students finding work

College enjoys high placement

Vocational students at Panola College have a good chance of finding a job in their field of study. The college's placement rate is 85%, which is higher than the national average of 70%. The college has a strong relationship with local businesses, and many of its students find jobs through the college's placement office.

Carthage oil, gas news

A Yuletide tour of the Carthage area reveals some interesting oil and gas activities. The recent rain has filled the tanks on the Carthage Creek, and the oil and gas companies are busy drilling for new wells. The Carthage Oil and Gas Association is planning a tour of the area for the first week of January. The tour will include visits to several oil and gas companies and a chance to see the new wells being drilled. The tour will be led by local oil and gas experts, and there will be a chance to ask questions and learn more about the industry. The tour is open to all interested in learning more about the oil and gas industry in Carthage.
