Mutant Ninja Turtles are bad news

Do you let your kids watch the show that also shows a film about the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles? If so, beware the parents of your own young sons and daughters. This summer, parents of young children in the Panola County area have been trying to teach their children the difference between fantasy and reality. The result has been a series of incidents where children have been bitten by real-life turtles, much to the horror of their parents.

According to the local police, the first incident occurred last summer when a group of children were playing in a nearby park. One of the children, aged 5, slipped and fell off a small rock into a nearby pond. When he爬 out of the water, he was instantly attacked by a group of real turtles, which had been swimming in the pond.

The child's parents, who were watching the incident from a short distance, were horrified to see their child being attacked by the turtles. They immediately ran to the child and were able to free him from the clutches of the animals. The child was uninjured, but the experience has left him traumatized.

Another incident occurred last month when a group of children were playing in a nearby river. One of the children, aged 6, fell into the water and was immediately attacked by a group of real turtles. The child was able to escape, but his parents were shocked to see their child covered in scratches and bites.

In both cases, the parents of the children were able to prevent any serious injuries. However, the incidents have raised concerns about the safety of children playing near bodies of water in the Panola County area.

As a result, the local police are advising parents to be vigilant when their children are playing near bodies of water. They recommend that parents always supervise their children when they are near bodies of water and that children never try to swim or play in bodies of water alone.

The police also advise that parents of children who are fans of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles should be aware of the potential dangers that real turtles can pose. They recommend that parents talk to their children about the difference between fantasy and reality and that children should be aware of the potential dangers that real animals can pose.

In conclusion, the incidents involving real turtles remind us of the importance of being aware of the potential dangers that real animals can pose. As a result, the police are urging parents to be vigilant when their children are playing near bodies of water and to talk to their children about the difference between fantasy and reality.

Senators adopt burden sharing for Desert Storm

The Senate has adopted a resolution that calls for a fair share of the burden of Desert Storm. The resolution calls for the United States to share the costs of the war with other nations that have also contributed to the war effort.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 80-25. The 80 senators who voted in favor of the resolution included 57 Republicans and 23 Democrats. The 25 senators who voted against the resolution included 24 Republicans and 1 Democrat.

The Senate resolution is in line with a similar resolution adopted by the House of Representatives last week. The House resolution calls for a fair share of the burden of Desert Storm and was adopted by a vote of 247-170.

The adoption of the Senate resolution is seen as a positive step towards ensuring that all nations that have contributed to the war effort share the costs of Desert Storm. It is hoped that the adoption of the Senate resolution will lead to similar actions by other nations.

Our readers write...

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my support for the resolution adopted by the Senate. The resolution is a fair and just way to ensure that all nations that have contributed to the war effort share the costs of Desert Storm.

Sincerely,
