By CHARLES McCLURE

Carruth-Nosee Lions were named the winner of the annual Christmas Festival held downtown. The Lions, which consist of 50 members, won first place last year. The Lions have been involved in the festival since its inception.

The Lions will host a Christmas dinner at the Lions Club building on December 24th. Tickets are available at the Lions Club office or by calling (555) 1234. Proceeds from the dinner will be used to support local charities.

Nursing home issue discussed at Lions meeting

County judge urges sale

This to avoid a financial crisis, the county judge is urging the sale of the nursing home. The nursing home has been losing money for several years and is in danger of closing. The judge believes that the sale of the nursing home would be the best solution for the county.

The judge made the announcement at a county commission meeting. He stated that the county cannot continue to support the nursing home and that it is time to consider other options.

The nursing home issue was discussed at a meeting of the county commission. The judge argued that the sale of the nursing home would be the best solution for the county. He stated that the county cannot continue to support the nursing home and that it is time to consider other options.

Time draws short for 1991 absentee voting

The time is running out for those who wish to vote absentee for the upcoming election. Absentee voting is open until November 30th. Absentee ballots must be returned to the county clerk by the 2nd of December.

The county clerk's office is located at 123 Main Street. Absentee ballots can be obtained from the clerk's office or by calling (555) 1234. Absentee voting is a great way to ensure that you can vote if you cannot be at the polls on election day.

CHS choir sweepstakes winners

The CHS choir was announced as the winner of the sweepstakes for the upcoming performance. The choir is made up of 50 students and is under the direction of Dr. John Kimble. The choir will perform at the state convention on February 5th.

The choir has been preparing for the performance for several months. They have been working hard to perfect their performance and are excited to be able to represent the school at the state level.

Athens coach named

Gary principal hired

Gary High School has named Coach John Smith as the new head football coach. Coach Smith has been with the school for five years and has been an assistant coach for the last two.

Athens coach John Smith was named the new head football coach at Gary High School. Coach Smith has been with the school for five years and has been an assistant coach for the last two. He is replacing Coach Bob Johnson, who retired after 15 years of service.

Coach Smith is excited to take on the new position. "I'm looking forward to working with the players and helping them achieve their goals," he said.

The new head football coach at Gary High School is Coach John Smith. Coach Smith has been with the school for five years and has been an assistant coach for the last two. He is replacing Coach Bob Johnson, who retired after 15 years of service.

Coach Smith is excited to take on the new position. "I'm looking forward to working with the players and helping them achieve their goals," he said.

The new head football coach at Gary High School is Coach John Smith. Coach Smith has been with the school for five years and has been an assistant coach for the last two. He is replacing Coach Bob Johnson, who retired after 15 years of service.

Coach Smith is excited to take on the new position. "I'm looking forward to working with the players and helping them achieve their goals," he said.

Birthday boy busted with crack cocaine

Ukiah, Calif. (AP) — A 17-year-old boy was arrested here on Sunday for possession of cocaine, according to Ukiah Police Department Lt. Bill Johnson.

The boy, identified as John Doe, was stopped on suspicion of driving under the influence. Lt. Johnson said that officers smelled the odor of cocaine on the boy's breath.

He was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and other related offenses.

Lt. Johnson said that officers smelled the odor of cocaine on the boy's breath.

He was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and other related offenses.

Lt. Johnson said that officers smelled the odor of cocaine on the boy's breath.

He was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and other related offenses.

Lt. Johnson said that officers smelled the odor of cocaine on the boy's breath.

He was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and other related offenses.
Panola County not affected by census error
Texas minorities not counted

As many as 500,000 Texas voters may have been disenfranchised or denied representation in the 1990 election due to the failure of Census Bureau officials to count the state’s minority population. The problem is one of many nationwide.

The biggest concentration of the undercounted minority population is in Texas, where 371,000 minority voters were not counted, according to an analysis of Census Bureau data by civil rights groups.

In a report released today, the U.S. Census Bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The undercount was discovered by the Census Bureau after it received a report from the Texas Democratic Party. The party had complained that the bureau had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 20 percent.

“Texas may have been undercounted, but the problem is nationwide,” said John W. Hope, a member of the Texas Democratic Party’s executive committee, in a release.

The Census Bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.

The bureau said it had underestimated the number of minority voters in Texas by 371,000, or 9 percent.

The bureau acknowledged that it had failed to count minority voters in the state, but said it had made a good-faith effort to count them.

“The Census Bureau is committed to making sure that everyone is counted in the 1990 census,” said bureau spokesman Thomas W. Johnson.
Wright hurts 4-1 win; Tullis homers

Ponies nail down state meet berth

Hitt gets 6-3 decision
Chaddrick homer helps Ponies win

Boyles wins fourth, 11-4
Panola cops two

Softball league
could have 10

Hollenshead wins 800 run

Lions rally from behind
Bearcats bow, 5-3
before Union Grove

In region golf
Lady Dogs cop third

Enjoy The Great Outdoors
With Over 10,000 Low Prices Every Day

You can shut your eyes, but not your ears.
Preserve your hearing. Natural Mrahamine.*

America's Supermarket®

Prices good 6/1/91 through 6/30/91. All drugs-Dixie Marketplace stores.}

Note to readers: We reserve the right to limit quantities. Copyright 1991 Dixie Super Stores, Inc.
College bands to present concert

Final performance of year

Sale helps raise money against drugs

PGH celebrates hospital week

The Time To Save Is Now!

Lifestyles

Panola Profiles

We did it so you don't have to

Charles Williams

Avery Garrett

Mother's Day

Celebrates hospital week

Informed Bride

Carthage oil, gas news

Shady Grove church holds revival services

NOBODY CAN GIVE YOU A BETTER DEAL ON 1ST QUALITY CARPET THAN CASSITY JONES.
Banquet honors local lawmen

By CHARLES MACLEOD

The Panola County Lawmen's Association recently honored two Panola County lawmen at a banquet. The event was held at the DeSoto Ballroom in downtown Enterprise. The lawmen, who were recognized for their dedication and service to the community, included Joe Woodard and Tommy Dishman.

"Public recognition is very important to officers. It feels nice to know that people appreciate us."

— Skatey Dishman

Area School Menus

PANOLA COUNTY

POLITICAL CALENDAR

Panola County Fresh Water Board

J.D. Woodard
Place 2

Beckville School Board

Calvin Whiddon

DeSoto Baptist Church

is having a
STARLIGHT SKUDDLE

May 3 & 4, Saturday & Sunday

Swing into Spring

Kelli & Shawna Walsh

Everyone invited: Nursery Provided

In case of rain, services will be held in the sanctuary.

Eric Wilburn, pastor

Commission continues oil production rate

The Panola County Commission has continued the oil production rate that was previously set. This will allow for a more stable revenue stream for the county.

uali (Panola County Post)