Baptists approve plan

The Baptist Convention of Texas is going to maintain its 75 percent ownership of the Dallas Baptist University in Dallas, according to the Baptist Board of Directors, which approved a plan to do so. The university was founded in 1856 and has a current enrollment of 1,600 students. The board voted to approve the plan after a series of meetings in which it considered various options for the future of the university. The plan will allow the university to remain a Baptist institution while also providing for future growth and development.
