CONGRESS CHAPMAN

1993 HIGHWAY AUTHORIZATION BILL AND THE MID-AMERICAN CONNECTION

The Mid-American Connection, which is a proposal to expand Interstate 80 from the Ohio River to the Mississippi River, has been put on hold by Congress. The bill, which was introduced by Representative Jim Chapman, was expected to be voted on this week, but it has been postponed due to the continued debate over funding for highway projects.

The Mid-American Connection is a new highway that would connect the two major rivers in the United States. It would begin at the Ohio River in Kentucky and end at the Mississippi River in Illinois. The proposed route would go through several states, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri. The highway would be a major improvement for transportation in the region, providing a direct route for goods and people to travel between the two major cities.

The bill was introduced by Representative Jim Chapman, a member of the House Transportation Committee. He said the Mid-American Connection would be a major boost for the economy of the Midwest and would create thousands of jobs.

However, the bill has faced opposition from some members of Congress. Some have raised concerns about the cost of the project and the impact it would have on the environment. The bill has also been criticized for not including provisions for addressing climate change.

Despite these concerns, Chapman remains optimistic that the bill will be passed in the near future. "I am confident that we will be able to work out the differences and get the Mid-American Connection approved," he said. "This is a project that will benefit the entire Midwest and we need to get it done now."
