Young readers honored

Solving community problems may seem like a task too big for older citizens, but a group of fourth-grade students at the local elementary school is working on a problem and presenting a solution.

The students have been researching and planning a proposed renovation of the Bethel Elementary Community Garden.

The garden is located on a small plot of land that is considered waste land.

The students have been conducting a survey of the garden and interviewing local residents to determine the best use of the land.

They plan to present their findings to the school board in the near future.

See page 7A for more information.

CHRIS' DILL, regional qualifier

First Impressions

Enjoy Easter Dinner with Mr. Sadows, April 19

We have tried driving several times now and love the new cars and vans we have been driving. Most of the time, we take the big car to the city and the little car for our trips around the state. We also have a small truck that we use for transportation. We have found that the new cars are more fuel efficient than our old ones, and the vans have more space for luggage and supplies. Overall, we are happy with our new vehicles and enjoy the experience of driving them.

We have also been able to use the benefits of the homestead exemption to lower our property taxes. This has been a great help in controlling our budget and has allowed us to focus more on other aspects of our lives.

Who qualifies for an exemption?

Anyone who owns a home on Jan. 1st (and uses it as their principal residence) may be eligible for a homestead exemption. The amount of the exemption depends on your income and the value of your property. In general, the higher your income and the value of your property, the less likely you are to qualify for an exemption.

Are there other exemptions available?

Yes, there are other exemptions available in addition to the homestead exemption. For example, the disabled veteran exemption, the blind exemption, and the senior citizen exemption. Each has different qualifications and benefits, so you should review them carefully to see if you qualify.

When and where should I file?

Applications should be filed by April 1st at your appraiser's district office. If you need more time, contact the appraiser at (512) 673-7955 for an extension.
