Three major drug busts in as many days last week produced two arrest warrants and seized a number of illegal drugs in the Capital City. The most recent bust involved the United States marshals service and resulted in the arrest of a local man and the seizure of a large quantity of marijuana. The other two busts involved the Capital City Sheriff's Department and resulted in the arrest of two local men and the seizure of a smaller quantity of marijuana. The total weight of the drugs seized was 150 pounds, and all the cases are pending in court.

No plan has majority support yet
School funding as uncertain as ever

'True' is a significant decrease in the amount of federal funding going to public school districts. The state's share of the cost of public education has also decreased, which means districts are now responsible for a larger portion of the funding. In addition, the Texas Legislature has not yet finalized the state's budget for the next fiscal year, leaving schools in limbo. The lack of a clear funding plan makes it difficult for schools to plan for the future and can lead to budget cuts and reduced programs. Without a clear plan, schools and districts are left to speculate about what the future holds for public education in Texas.

Here's what Panola County residents have to say about the dedicated men and women providing advanced life support care through East Texas Medical Center EMS:
- Your personnel gave very efficient and thoughtful treatment both during the ambulance transfer and for about an hour proceeding it. I feel that they should be commended for their dedication in promoting quality care and compassionate service.
- Skilled in the performance of their duty, the paramedics fixed up the situation and immediately applied oxygen, thereby saving my sister's life. An outstanding job.
- We want to express our appreciation for the very professional manner in which your emergency medical team handled a very difficult situation. We are fortunate to have such highly caliber and professional men handling our ambulance service.
- Recently, my 88-year-old grandmother fell, and we had to call an ambulance. The attendants were friendly, efficient, and very considerate. I am extremely proud that we have such an outstanding ambulance service in our county.

An era ends for NBC's 'Tonight Show'

Cartoon runs long shot

By Barbara S. Walker

It was a bittersweet moment for fans of the show when Johnny Carson announced his retirement in May 1992. Carson, who had hosted the show for 30 years, was widely regarded as one of the greatest late-night talk show hosts in television history. His final show aired on May 22, 1992, to an estimated audience of 22 million viewers. Carson's departure marked the end of an era for NBC's 'Tonight Show,' which had been a staple of prime-time television for decades. Carson's legacy lives on, and his influence can still be seen in the work of many late-night hosts today.

On becoming 'The Environmental Tourist'

Important special needs to fight

By Rebecca Alford

For many, the concept of environmental tourism might seem like a contradiction in terms. However, as the world becomes increasingly aware of the impact of human activities on the environment, there is a growing interest in visiting places that are committed to sustainability and conservation. This trend has given rise to a new category of tourists known as the "environmental tourist." These travelers seek out destinations that prioritize eco-friendly practices and conservation initiatives, and they often support local communities that are working to preserve natural resources. By choosing to visit places that are environmentally responsible, environmental tourists can help support the causes they care about and contribute to a more sustainable future.
