Jewelry heist suspect arrested

By CHRLDS MCCLURE

Although it is some time since estimates were released, the market value of the stolen jewelry is still being calculated. The damage report, which was filed on July 19, 1993, which represents 27 percent decrease in value from the last year, has been released. Over 50 percent of the stolen jewelry was recovered, according to the police. The recovered jewelry has been cleaned and is currently in the possession of the jeweler. The remaining jewelry is of variable value, and the market value of the stolen items would be difficult to determine.

Chief Inspector John Popper of the Police Department issued the report, which stated that the investigation is ongoing.

The final certified value reported is $1,739,582.
