Senior citizens unhappy with program

By CHARLES MCLAUGHLIN

Some local senior citizens say they are unhappy with a program that is supposed to help them. The program is called the "Senior Citizen Program," and it is run by the local government. The seniors say they are not getting the help they need, and they are not sure if the program is working as intended. They are requesting more information and assistance from the government. They are also requesting a meeting with the program's leaders to discuss their concerns. They believe that the program is not working and that the government needs to do more to help the seniors.
