Young reporters learn art of news

By LAURA NEIGHT

But all of the press is not newsworthy to the field of Palo Alto News reporters.

The Educators’ Chronicle has printed in its 38th issue and to staffed with the news of the Palo Alto News.

The Chronicle is eight or nine pages published in a format of limited or condensed school activities, interviews with teachers and printed issues on news such as a newspaper.

Produced by bright students in the classes of Sheila Sica and Professor of Journalism, the Chronicle is now being distributed to Palo Alto News reporters and students.

3.4.5.6.

"We try to get the students aware of the newspaper," said the Chronicle editor, "The kids go through the whole process of publishing a newspaper. They get that enthusiasm, confidence, putting it on paper, framing, editing, and polishing."

"Our goal is to produce a newspaper that students will want to read."

The Chronicle is also an outcome of some students who are not part of the staff.

"I think this summer school is a wonderful experience for students," said the Chronicle editor, "They don’t have to do anything to be part of the Chronicle."

The Chronicle is also open to all students, not just the students who are part of the staff.

"They all work hard," said the Chronicle editor, "They really enjoy each other’s company.

Much ado about nothing

School season comes up empty

"We have some very incredible political parties planned on this floor, and you can look at the doors right down the line," Richards said in an interview. "Honestly, I think it was just a shooting game." Richards went on to say that the issue was not significant enough to dwell on.

"I was a little surprised," Richards recalled. "It was a little shocking, and I was a little surprised at the whole ordeal."

The incident was still under investigation as of this writing.

The Christmas lights are out and the decorations are being put away. But for many, the spirit of Christmas remains alive in their hearts. As the holiday season comes to a close, let us reflect on the lessons of love, kindness, and giving.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS SHOULD BE MADE BEFORE THE NEW YEAR

People generally wait until the first of January to make a list of their new year's resolutions. However, with the holiday season at hand, there are some suggestions that we should make right away. Let us resolve to be more patient when the traffic slows down in holiday grids. Be more courteous with overworked people. It is not because we areforces in the first place to muddle around that we may have had with someone, to give us in the peace, to be friendly and helpful with our neighbors, particularly there where it is handicapped, and to attend our House of Worship. Doing those things will give us a good feeling, and along with the lights and decorations, will help to bring the true spirit of the holidays to ourselves and everyone around us.

"God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."
