Meaningful symbols

Tis the season to be busted

A young boy checks out Santa Claus after the Christmas parade in downtown Carthage. With just two more days until Christmas, the Elves are on double working overtime to get ready for Thursday night's big event.

Christmas is full of symbolism. Usually, this symbolism is used to depict the end of the year and the beginning of a new one. However, it is also used to represent the celebration of Jesus Christ's birthday.

But did you know that the Christmas tree, which is so deeply rooted in American culture, is the symbol of recycling? The Christmas tree represents the process of regrowth and renewal, symbolizing the cycle of life and death.

Holly wreaths are also a symbol of Christmas. The holly plant is associated with the winter solstice and is believed to bring good fortune and joy during the holiday season.

Tis the season to be busted

It seems as if every drug dealer is trying to cash in on the Christmas season.

PERSPECTIVES

By The Perders

Seeing through Madison Avenue

What is the purpose of Madison Avenue?

Madison Avenue is the hub of the advertising world. It is where the biggest agencies are located, such as Grey, DDB Needham, and Saatchi & Saatchi. These agencies work for major clients, such as Coca-Cola, IBM, and Procter & Gamble.

For example, when Coca-Cola wants to launch a new product, they will hire an advertising agency to create an advertising campaign. The agency will come up with a concept for the ad, write the script, and then provide it to the client for approval.

Once the client approves the script, the agency will hire a production company to create the ad. The production company will then shoot the ad, edit it, and add music.

Finally, the ad will be shown on television, radio, and in print. The goal of the ad is to create brand awareness and encourage people to buy the product.

In summary, Madison Avenue is the center of the advertising industry. It is where the major agencies are located and where most of the major advertising campaigns are created.

Tyson people are proud of what we do and how we do it. Through the quality work of thousands of team members, we make wholesome products to feed America’s families. The same success is present in our workplace.

Tyson Foods has an average lost-workday accident rate that is 33 percent better than the rest of the poultry industry and 165 percent better than U.S. industry.

We back our environmental commitment by implementing state-of-the-art water treatment programs, reducing the amount of materials in our packaging, and investing capital to continually improve our environmental practices.

Our wage and benefit package surpasses any in our industry.

Our company is active in every community where we operate. We participate in fundraisers, civic organizations and efforts to help the needy. Tyson taxes also support public services like schools, police and fire protection, and emergency services.

We would like to say thank you to all of our people, especially those who serve on special work teams. Their commitment makes our company the best and safest in the industry.

People from a variety of jobs dedicate their time to special work teams to ensure plant safety, help redesign work stations, and respond to plant emergencies.

The Sheriff's Report

In Sheriff Jack Smith's office, the atmosphere was tense. The recent rash of crimes in the county had left the residents on edge. Smith sat at his desk, reviewing the files on the new cases. He knew that his team had been working tirelessly to solve these crimes, but progress was slow. Smith's phone rang, interrupting his thoughts.
