A search committee has narrowed the pool of applicants for the presidency of Pacific College down to three finalists.

The three will need to visit Carlsbad in March to meet with college officials, and for interviews before a final decision is made.

Board member Rodela Shigemoto, who chaired the presidential search committee, said the finalists were selected after an intensive search that began in February. By March, the name of the third finalist will be announced.

The finalists are: Dr. John J. Dyer of Telluride, Colorado; and Dr. Karen E. Ray of Austin, Texas; and Dr. William F. Edmondson of Chico, California.

A new president will receive an annual salary of $82,000, plus relocation expenses and a one-year extension of the president's contract.

The finalists will be interviewed by the 16-member search committee, which includes five students, five faculty and six administrators.
