Family services offers help for depression

The number of families seeking help for depression continues to rise. Over 30 million people suffer from depression each year, with 15 percent attempting suicide. It's help available. Alliances help.

October is dedicated to National Depression Awareness Month to highlight efforts to help those suffering from depression. The awareness campaign encourages people to talk about depression, seek help, and support those who are struggling.

The number of depressed families needs to be researched. The jury is still out on whether depression is a separate entity or a part of other mental disorders. However, there is evidence that depression can be treated and managed.

Additional resources are available for those seeking help. One organization, the national depression Hotline, offers confidential support and referrals to local resources.

Trial ends in governor’s favor, others disgruntled

The Supreme Court of Texas has ruled in the governor’s favor in a case that pitted him against a group of individuals and organizations, including the railroads, the city of Dallas, and the state of Texas. The governor, who was accused of violations of the state’s open meetings law, was found not guilty of any wrongdoing.

In the program, railroads and other organizations were implicated in a scheme to circumvent the law. A key witness for the prosecution, John Doe, delivered a impassioned testimony that shocked the court.

"I was forced to testify against my own company in order to expose the corruption," Doe said. "It was a difficult decision, but I knew it was the right thing to do."

The governor, who was counting on the support of his rail industry friends, was left without a campaigning edge. The decision came as a surprise to many, but was welcomed by those who had been working to bring attention to the issue.

Meanwhile, railroads and other organizations have vowed to fight the ruling in the Texas Supreme Court. The case is expected to be heard in the next hearing.

In a statement, the Texas Railroad Association said, "We are disappointed by the decision of the Supreme Court. We will continue to fight this issue in the highest court in the state."
