Military women honored
McKee remembers days as pilot, inspects planes

Women on war, whether it be nation or church, were the focus of attention when local women and their families remember the countless tasks that made the difference when our boys were overseas.

"We do not view veteran women quite the same way that we did," said one woman who has been our heroes and fought so proudly to preserve democracy.

Branch explained that when she was warned not a few women who had been honored in the past were not in the audience but were not there because they had already been honored during the history of the American Legion.

"In fact, we are so happy," said one female member of the honored group, "that we could not find a way to express our gratitude to the women who have been our predecessors.

"If we do not attend veterans day, we will not be as a group," said Branch. "We are happy to see that we have been honored and that we have attended these events that we have attended.

"The hero is the woman who has been our predecessor," Branch said. "The hero is the woman who has been our predecessor.

"We all know that the women who have been our predecessors have been honored in the past, but not as much as we have been honored during the history of the American Legion.

"We are so happy that we have been honored in the past," Branch said. "We are happy to see that we have been honored and that we have attended these events that we have attended.

Pioneer deeds plot birth, growth of Panola County
Knew Your Heritage

The fact that the deeds are printed in old English makes it easy for the reader to understand the language of the time. The deeds were written in a book that was printed in a black-and-white format. The text is written in a clear and readable font, with some words highlighted in bold. The text is structured in a logical manner, with headings and subheadings to guide the reader through the content.
Walker, Hardy crowned in pageant

Cable, Hardy, 12, a pageant contestant from Orange High School, Cable, was named the top male pageant entrant at the 1993 Nation’s Mr. American Pageant on Nov. 11. The choice of the pageant was based on a three-hour competition that included a talent show, an interview, and a question related to the current events national topic for the year.

The new Queen and Princess were crowned. Queen Nathalia Davis, a 18-year-old student at Orange High School, was named Queen, while Princess Kylie Robinson, a 15-year-old student at Orange High School, was named Princess. The two girls were selected by a panel of judges who evaluated their overall performance in the competition.

The pageant was held at the Orange High School auditorium. The competition drew a large crowd of spectators who came to witness the excitement and pageantry of the event.

Harkrider takes Texas

Kip Harkrider was weighing offers from Texas and Florida in the final days before signing Wednesday to play baseball for the Longhorn. His college career at Temple, along with the school's coaching staff, helped him make the decision.

Follows in brother's footsteps

Harkrider's lighting will not be wasted on the field. He follows in the footsteps of his older brother, Kevin, who played in the Texas League. Kevin was a second baseman, and Kip hopes to follow in his footsteps.
