A different way of life

Students learn about first Americans

By LAURA MORRIS

The students learned about the Caddo Indians, the first Americans to live in the area, at a recent presentation by Charles McNeel. The Caddo are known for their unique culture and way of life, which has been preserved through traditional beliefs and practices.

The presentation began with a discussion of the Caddo's history and settlement patterns, which were heavily influenced by their environment. The Caddo were a migratory people who lived in small groups and traveled to different areas to hunt and gather food. They lived in temporary shelters made of animal hides and used a variety of tools to hunt and fish.

The students were also introduced to the Caddo's use of technology, which includes the use of technological tools and techniques, such as the use of fire and the making of pottery. They learned about the Caddo's use of fire for cooking, warmth, and as a way to signal for help. They also learned about the Caddo's use of pottery for cooking and storing food.

The presentation ended with a discussion of the Caddo's legacy and their impact on the area. The students were encouraged to learn more about the Caddo and their way of life, and to appreciate the unique culture and traditions that the Caddo have passed down to future generations.

The Caddo are a proud and resilient people, and their legacy will continue to be an important part of the area's history and culture.

Whitehead campaigns to abolish office

Texas chamber president named

AUSTIN — State Treasurer David Whitehead echoed what he believes is a growing sentiment among the chamber of commerce in Texas: the need for a state Chamber of Commerce.

When Whitehead, who represents the 2nd District of Texas, introduced the bill to establish the chamber at the State Capitol in Austin Thursday, he said the chamber would have an important role in promoting the state's business interests.

"The chamber will be a voice for the business community," Whitehead said. "It will help bring together the business community and the government to work for the benefit of all Texans."

Whitehead said the need for a chamber of commerce is long overdue because it has been too long since the business community has had a voice in the state government.

The chamber's goals, which are to be set by the business community, will include advocating for business-friendly legislation and working to improve the state's business climate.

Whitehead said the chamber will be a forum for the business community to discuss issues that affect their businesses. The chamber will also work to ensure that the business community is represented in the state government.

"The chamber will be a voice for the business community," Whitehead said. "It will help bring together the business community and the government to work for the benefit of all Texans."

Panola events TEC mark with big win

Torrid Ponies gun down Lee, 109-86

Panola Ponies couldn’t have asked for a better way to start the Southern Conference season and start the new year. One week after playing in the NCAA III Regional Final, the Ponies dominated the Bulldogs of Lee University by a score of 109-86 for a 10-0 record in TEC play.

Panola rolled out to an early 17-0 run that was led by their defense. It took Lee nearly 4 minutes to score during that stretch.

The Ponies then led by 29 points at half."

Tracing one's ancestry is like a jigsaw puzzle...

By SHERRY MANSHAG

Tracing one's ancestry is like a jigsaw puzzle—each piece of information is a piece that fits into the overall picture. Just as a puzzle's pieces may be scattered, so too can genealogical records. Different sources may contain the same information, but it may be presented in different ways or be located in different places. Just as one needs to be patient and persistent when solving a puzzle, so too does one need to be patient and persistent when tracing one's ancestry.

Grandparents bear a wealth of information. I wish I had become interested in my own heritage before they died. The past is the present— if you don't know something about the past then you are poor.

Grandparents bear a wealth of information. I wish I had become interested in my own heritage before they died. The past is the present— if you don't know something about the past then you are poor.

The next room contains a room with a wealth of information—the family and the family history. The family is the foundation of society, and it is through the family that we learn our values, our traditions, and our history. The family is also the place where we get our sense of identity and our sense of belonging.
