City in danger from truck traffic

Signs need work

BY TED LEACH

The most recent series of accidents at the intersection of 11th and Dumas Street has led to a plea for larger signs at the intersection. The most recent accident occurred on Thursday night, and the aftermath of the crash has prompted a review of the problem and brought about the following suggestions for improvement:

A new report was conducted by the City Traffic Engineer, and the report made it clear that larger signs are necessary to warn drivers of the intersection. The report also recommended the installation of a traffic signal at the intersection. The City Council has been asked to consider the recommendation, and it is expected that a decision will be made soon.

Accident blocks Shelby St.

Five blocks of Shelby St. were blocked off for over an hour Wednesday afternoon after a truck collision resulted in all traffic being rerouted around the roadblock in front of the Police Station. The accident occurred at 12:30 p.m., when driver Mary Ann Smith collided with a truck, causing all traffic in that area to be stopped for over an hour. The accident was caused by Smith's carelessness, and it is expected that no one was injured in the incident.

PGH okays changes in personnel manual

Pennsylvania General Hospital Board of Directors at its first meeting of the year, held on the first floor of the Administration Building, has approved changes to the personnel manual of the hospital.

PGH employees, who were notified of the changes in advance, are expected to see the new manual in the coming weeks.

PGH employees have been working hard to improve the hospital's services and to provide a better environment for patients. The changes in the personnel manual are expected to help achieve these goals.
Teen pregnancy program catches national network eye

By LULA BRACIE

Early February was a tough time for Wanda Sleep, the director of the teen pregnancy prevention program at the Sherman Health Department. The program, which focuses on educating young people about the risks of teen pregnancy, has been struggling to attract enough participants to keep it running.

"I believe that the program is needed in Sherman," Sleep said. "But we're having a hard time getting the word out." Sleep said that the program has been in place for five years, but has struggled to gain support from the community.

"We've tried everything we can think of," Sleep said. "We've had informational meetings, we've had fliers in local businesses, we've even had ads in the newspaper." But despite these efforts, the program has been unable to attract enough participants to keep it running.

Sleep said that she hopes to see more support for the program in the future.

"I think that we need to do a better job of reaching out to the community," Sleep said. "I think that we need to make sure that people know about the program and the benefits that it can provide."
