Blaze sparked at UP

Lightning strikes twice

As thunderstorms again drenched the hilly campus of the University of the Philippines, a lightning strike tore through a UP dormitory this morning, causing a fire that resulted in four injuries and a partial evacuation of the structure.

Emergency workers were called to the dormitory, located near the Administration Building, just after 6 a.m. when witnesses reported hearing a loud explosion followed by flames seen shooting up from a 500-kilo water tank that had been struck by lightning for the second time in less than an hour.

Although there were no injures and the fire was brought under control quickly, the task served to illustrate the dangers posed by lightning strikes, especially during the rainy season when thunderstorms are common.

Sometimes media types deserve to be pounded

They say every news media type has its fans and haters. I've been a media type, and I've heard that often. But I've also heard that some people just don't appreciate what the media does. They don't seem to understand the importance of what we do. And sometimes, I think they just don't care. They don't care about the work we do or the value we bring to society. They just don't care. And that's a shame. Because the media is important. It's essential to society. It's a necessary evil, if you will. But without the media, we'd be lost. We'd be lost in a world of ignorance and misinformation. So, I say this: Let's appreciate the media. Let's support the media. Let's listen to what the media has to say. And let's not let the haters bring us down.
