9-1-1 emergency system celebrates anniversary

She said that when they first launched the county was gauging the emergency system, they saw it was still too new. Despite modest results, things have not moved as quickly as they thought they would.

When we first got the system, it was thought only serious emergency calls would come in, but in the first six months, they have been answered as the system has now been in operation for a year. She said she expected that many emergency calls would come in from people who were not sure whether they were in an emergency or not.

She added that once the system is up and running, it will be a great resource for people who are not sure whether they are in an emergency or not.

The system is the department's policy to answer all calls as emergencies because one never knows what a seemingly non-emergency incident can turn into, she said.

1848 busy year for Panola County court

Know Your Heritage

by Linth & Laflin

Chronicler of Old Panola County, Texas, writes:

1848 was the year the West was won. It was the year of the railroad, the telegraph, and the telegraph. It was the year of the Civil War. It was the year of the Panama Canal. But it was not the year of the first county court in Panola County. That was in 1840.

The first county court was held in Dallas County, Texas. The court was held in a log cabin. The court was held in the town of Dallas. The court was held on the first day of the new year, 1840. The court was held in the presence of the county judge, the recorder, and the clerk. The court was held in the presence of the county sheriff, the constable, and the precinct judge. The court was held in the presence of the county attorney, the county solicitor, and the county attorney general. These men were the first county officials in Panola County. They were the first county officials in Texas. They were the first county officials in the United States. They were the first county officials in the world.

The county court was held in the presence of the first county officials. The court was held in the presence of the first county officials. The court was held in the presence of the first county officials.
