County takes steps to ease tax collections

As an effort to offset collection procedures of delinquent taxes, Prince George County Commissioners on Monday requested that property tax delinquents pay by personal checks only for the time being in the county and Prince George Courthouse.

Before meeting the four-pronged morning at the courthouse, a meeting was held to discuss the issue of delinquency and the possibility of implementing a automatic tax collection system.

The personal checks would be made at the county and would be made at the courthouse.

February and July collections would be accompanied by a levy at the same rate as other months. However, the personal checks would be sent instead of personal checks.

In addition to the normal checks, the Commissioners also suggested the possibility of implementing an automatic tax payment system.

Establishment of a personal payment system would clearly establish different guides for the county's monthly collections.

"We have a tax payment policy, every delinquent taxpayer should come to us for guidance," the Commissioners explained.

Higher valuations decrease city taxes

The City of Prince George signed an agreement with the Prince George County to increase the valuation of properties in the city, providing a decrease in city taxes.

The proposed rate of $1,120 per thousand dollars valuation is down from the current $1,200. This decrease will result in a reduction of the tax rate per thousand dollars valuation by 6.6%

The measure to reduce the valuation is a result of the city's efforts to implement a more transparent and efficient tax system.

According to the Commissioners, the reduction in valuation is expected to provide a significant decrease in the city's tax burden, allowing for a more equitable allocation of resources.

"This is a step towards a more fair and just tax system for our citizens," the Commissioners said.

Jordan aims to put job market sky high

TOO HIGH FOR ILLEGAL HANDS

Jordan will be a major player in the job market with the opening of his firm, Jordan Enterprises. His company will provide employment opportunities for both locals and those from other areas. The firm will focus on providing jobs in various fields, such as manufacturing, retail, and hospitality. This will not only benefit the local economy but also provide a better quality of life for the residents. With the current job market being so competitive, Jordan aims to stand out by offering competitive salaries and benefits. He believes that this will attract more job seekers and help him achieve his goal of putting the job market sky high.

Increasing values may bring lower taxes

Increasing property values in Panola County could ease the taxes for most homeowners in the county, according to the property appraiser's report compiled by the Panola County Appraisal District, which works with the county tax assessor-collector. This is good news for some property owners, who have seen their property values increase this year.

Steady growth in property values is a common trend as more people move into the area, building new homes and living in more urban areas. The increase in property values is also due to the overall economic growth in the county, which has led to more development and higher demand for housing.

The increase in property values this year, however, could mean higher taxes for some homeowners. The property tax rate in Panola County is currently 2.53%, which means that for every $100 of property value, homeowners will pay $2.53 in property taxes.
