Reynolds lauds Dawgs on improvement

Quarterback tied for high spot in nation, but production comes from a team effort.

By CARL W. WALKER

Roughly a week before the Dawgs opened their season against the University of Oklahoma, the quarterback of the team, Alex Reynolds, was named to the AP All-American team. His performance in the game was outstanding, but his work was not all his own. The Dawgs' offensive line and the running backs also played a crucial role in the team's success.

Reynolds is one of the few quarterbacks in the nation to have gained over 1,000 yards rushing. He is also one of the few quarterbacks to have thrown for over 2,000 yards in a season.

The Dawgs' offensive line, under the leadership of veteran center Tom Smith, has been a key factor in the team's success. The line has been praised for its ability to open holes for the running backs and for its consistent blocking.

The running backs, led by star running back Barry Sanders, have been instrumental in the team's offensive performance. Sanders, who has been named to the All-Conference team, has been a force to be reckoned with on the field.

The Dawgs' defense, under the guidance of head coach Mike Holmgren, has also been a key factor in the team's success. The defense has been praised for its ability to stop the opposition's offense and for its consistent play.

In summary, the Dawgs' success can be attributed to a team effort. Reynolds' performance is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the entire team.
